The WEEK

By A. M. BRAYTON

THE coal and railroad strikes continue to lead politics in their grip upon the public interest. Efforts of the government to bring about adjustments of both have not been successful to date.

Hope of settlement of the coal strike appears to be remote. This is indicated by a semi-official statement from Washington to the effect that President Harding has under advisement a plan for rationing coal. War methods will be used, coal being allotted to industries and citizens on the basis of what is most essential to the common welfare.

Secretary Hoover, however, has not given up hope in the mines. He found some encouragement in negotiations during the week, and is hopeful of progress when the conference is resumed Monday. Meantime the coal shortage is mounting.

The trend of news, including certain observations by railroad chiefs, indicates better prospects for an adjustment of the railroad difficulty. B. M. Jewell, head of the railroad department of the A. F. of L., is quoted as having said that if the union leaders and railroad managers could sit together at a table a settlement could be reached. Delay in bringing additional unions into the strike suggests that efforts looking toward a conference are being made. An exchange of assurances between the rail labor board and the workers has an amicable sound. Among other things, the board has issued a statement denying that it is interested in using the prospect of strike to forward the open shop movement.

Despite efforts of railroad leaders, disorders have occurred. These are largely in Illinois, which next to West Virginia and Pennsylvania, is given to violence in labor disputes. On the whole, order is well maintained, and the sincerity of both sides in preventing it appears to be above question. No doubt an element of bitterness was injected into the strike by a pronouncement of the rail labor board to the effect that the strike is a violation of contract that participating in it outlaws the employee, and that therefore men who take the place of strikers are not strike breakers. The action of certain railroads, sustained by the board, in notifying employees that those who do not return on or before July 10 will lose their seniority rights is another hard pill for the men to swallow. They think the board should find some way to outlaw railroads which it has found guilty of violating contracts with the men.

THE first free state appears to have made substantial progress in its efforts to put down the rebellion led by Eamon De Valera, president of the "Irish republic." There was considerable fighting during the week, in which all of the important strongholds are said to have fallen. De Valera is a fugitive, pursued by free state forces. A Dublin cable announces "the civil war is ended."

THE president of Brazil has been re-elected in the customary way. A change of administration there usually takes the form of an insurrection. Anti-administration forces seized the harbor at Rio, and the election proceeded daily. The bulletins were heavy, but in the end administration forces silenced the opposing faction. Friday's cables announced the surrender of the rebels, mostly without bloodshed.

DR. ARTHUR A. GANFIELD made his debut as a politician in an address delivered at Racine Friday night in which he presented himself to the people of Wisconsin as a candidate for the republican nomination for the United States senatorship in opposition to Senator Robert M. La Follette. Dr. Ganfield introduced an innovation in Wisconsin politics by limiting the address to 45 minutes. Should he adhere to this precedent he will win the applause of a grateful public. One of the things which keeps people away from political speeches is their length. A refreshing discourse on public affairs will hold an audience for about an hour. After that the best speaker becomes tiresome to the average run of people. One does not like to interrupt a speaker by leaving in the middle of his discourse. The result is that many people stay away rather than be tied up for two or three hours in a stuffy hall during the mid-summer heat. In an hour's talk a wise speaker can give an audience all it can digest for the moment.

The value of Dr. Ganfield's address depends largely upon its intent. If it was calculated merely to lay the ground for a number of short talks, it would pass muster. It would not, however, serve to win voters. It generalizes too much. Its clever epigrams are entertaining rather than convincing. It discloses insufficient knowledge of vital public questions. It offers practically nothing in the way of definite promises of constructive work.

STATE TROOPS CALLED OUT IN ILLINOIS

LUTHERAN HOSPITAL SUSTAINED; SMEDAL, WOLF LOSE IN SUIT

Judge Sustains Hospital's Contention in Mandamus Action; Quashes Motion for Writ

PHYSICIANS, BARRED FROM HOSPITAL, SOUGHT COURT AID

Trustees Have Right to Manage Hospital as they Deem Best

THE alternative writ of mandamus brought by Drs. Herman Wolf and E. Smedal to compel the La Crosse Lutheran Hospital association to permit them to send cases to the Lutheran hospital and to operate and administer treatments to their patients in the hospital, has been quashed by an order just received by Clerk of Circuit Court Kleeber from Judge Fowler of Fond du Lac, who heard the case last spring while sitting in court here in place of Judge Higbee.

Drs. Wolf and Smedal were represented by George H. Gordon, Law & Gordon, while Twesme & Weber were attorneys for the hospital association.

Rights Held Contractual

Mr. Twesme in his answer to the plaintiff's charges held that: First, Drs. Wolf and Smedal were not members of the hospital corporation and because of that fact could not demand reinstatement. Second, if the plaintiffs had any rights, they were rights by contract and contractual rights cannot be enforced by mandamus. Third, The by-laws of the attending staff are not the by-laws of the hospital corporation and that the board of trustees had exclusive right to manage the hospital as they deemed to be in the best interests of the hospital and could expel any member of the attending staff at will.

After adverse examinations before County Judge Brindley the case was set for trial at the May term of circuit court. Mr. Twesme demurred to the motion for an alternative writ of mandamus, made by Mr. Gordon, on the grounds that there was no cause for action. Following is the full text of the findings of Judge Fowler upholding Mr. Twesme's contentions:

Findings in Full

"The defendant is a corporation, eleemosynary in nature, chartered to conduct a hospital for the care and treatment of the sick. The plaintiffs are physicians who as members of the attending staff have been treating patients in the hospital and who claim the right to continue so to do. The defendant refused to permit them to do so. They bring mandamus to compel the defendant to permit them to continue to exercise the right claimed. To the avowed end that the corporation may perform the function contemplated by its charter. The case is upon motion of defendant to quash the alternative writ, on the ground that the complaint does not state a case for the writ.

"It is not alleged that the plaintiffs are members of the corporation; nor is it alleged of what membership in the corporation consists, to enable the court to determine from the facts alleged whether plaintiffs are or are not members of the corporation. The proceeding therefore cannot be considered as one to reinstate members expelled from the corporation, or to compel the corporation to permit them to exercise the rights or privileges of corporate membership.

Not Corporation Officers

"Nor is it alleged that the plaintiffs are officers of the corporation, and the proceeding can not therefore be considered as one to restore the plaintiffs to official position, or to compel the defendant to permit them to exercise rights or privileges pertinent to such position or to perform official duties.

"The complaint states that a Mrs. Sherwin, a patient of the plaintiffs, was refused entrance to the hospital except on condition that she request therefore be made by Dr. Andersen and that she place herself under his care and treatment. If it be that Mrs. Sherwin's rights were denied, she is not here moving to enforce them. And if it be that like refusal in other cases in the future would be a denial of public rights, I do not regard this proceeding as one to prevent such denial. The public are as much entitled to be received in the hospital and treated there by one physician as another. This proceeding is not brought for the purpose of compelling the public and to allow entrance to the hospital and treatment by the physician of their choice, but to compel the defendant to permit the plaintiffs to enter and treat their own patients, and only treat their own patients, and thus seek not to secure to the public their rights, but to secure to themselves rights peculiar to themselves. Neither the public generally or physicians (Continued on page six)

TARIFF ON RICE BRINGS SPLIT IN DEMOCRAT RANKS

Many Minority Senators Join With Republicans in Rejecting Lower Duties

LA FOLLETTE RENEWS ATTACK IN THREE-HOUR TALK SATURDAY

Says Fluctuating Conditions Makes Revision Now Unwise

WASHINGTON.—By the Associated Press.—There was another wide split Saturday among the democrats in the senate on the tariff measure, a number of them joining with the republicans in rejecting the lower rates on rice written into the bill by the finance committee majority. The house rates were approved on motion of the committee, which receded from its amendments. These rates are: Rough rice, one cent a pound; brown rice, 1-1/2 cents a pound; milled rice, 2 cents a pound; broken rice and rice meal, one cent a pound. While the rice paragraph was before the senate throughout the day, the debate took a wide range. Senator La Follette of Wisconsin renewed his attack on the bill, and particularly on the cotton schedule, speaking for three hours. He declared this was not the time to revise a tariff because of fluctuating conditions in the business world. He inveighed against the present system of tariff building, under which he said, "the tariff grabbers" went before congressional committees, asked for the rates they wanted and "as a rule were given exactly what they asked for."

ACCEPT FORD OFFER FOR MUSCLE SHOALS PROPOSAL BY LADD

Dakota Solon Introduces Bill Providing for Approval of Ford Proposition

WOULD INCLUDE GORGAS STEAM POWER PLANT IN THE LEASE

Would Mean Cheaper Nitrate for Farmers of the Country

WASHINGTON.—By The Associated Press.—Unconditional acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for purchase and lease of the Muscle Shoals projects, including the government's interests in the steam power plants at Gorgas, would be provided under a bill introduced in the senate today by Senator Ladd, republican, North Dakota. Senator Ladd said his measure had the approval of several members of the senate agricultural committee, of which he is a member. The North Dakota senator did not reveal the members of the committee who had approved the measure, but it was known that it was acceptable to the democratic members. Senator Ladd, in presenting the bill, called attention to the expenditures made by American farmers for nitrate importations from Chile and asked the senate if "the farmers should continue to pay more than $3,000,000 annually, when Mr. Ford offers to relieve them of these burdens at Muscle Shoals."

"The average importations of Chilean nitrate for five years, 1911-1915, inclusive," Senator Ladd said, amounted to 551,714 long tons, with an average value at the Chilean port of $17,511,597, and with an export duty paid to Chile on this tonnage amounting to $6,910,978.92. The cost of ocean freight, insurance, commissions, etc., on this five-year period of Chilean nitrate importations can be conservatively estimated at $10 a ton, making a total cost at port of approximately $29,339,815.92.

"Of this tonnage during this period, there was consumed as a fertilizer by the farmers, about 250,000 tons."

"Chilean nitrate carries about sixteen percent of nitrogen plant food or fixed nitrogen, and this 250,000 tons of Chilean nitrate used during this five-year period, therefore, yielded to the farmers 40,000 tons of nitrogen plant food or fixed nitrogen."

"Mr. Ford, in his final offer of May 30 expressly agrees and binds himself throughout the lease period to manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers, mixed or unmixed, and with or without filler, according to demands, and these fertilizers produced during the lease period shall have a nitrogen content of at least 10 percent of fixed nitrogen, and therefore, Mr. Ford agrees to produce fixed nitrogen at Muscle Shoals equal to the fixed nitrogen contained in that portion of Chilean nitrate used by the farmers in the five-year period, 1911-1915, inclusive, and it will require 100,000 horse-power to produce this amount of fixed nitrogen, namely, 40,000 tons, and so 200,000 horsepower will produce as much fixed nitrogen as was carried in the total importations during the five-year period, 1911-1915, inclusive."

"Shall the farmers continue to pay more than $3,000,000 annually, export duty to Chile for nitrates, plus ocean freight, commissions, insurance, etc., when Mr. Ford offers to relieve the farmers of these burdens at Muscle Shoals?"

Later Senator Ladd said he believed the Ford proposal would offer the best returns to the country of any development to be made at Muscle Shoals. After a careful study of the bill, he said, he was prepared to give it his support.

The measure was automatically referred to the agriculture committee.

QUARTER MILLION RUBLES REQUIRED TO CARRY RUSS LETTER

ABERDEEN, S. D.—A letter from Russia was received here Saturday bearing stamps worth 250,000 rubles for postage. In normal times this represented a fortune of $125,000. Sheets of 195 separate thousand and five thousand stamps made a bundle about the letter, the number, however diminished by souvenir hunters on its long trip.

BREAKS TRACK RECORD

ABERDEEN, S. D.—Fred Horey, professional dirt track driver, broke the five-mile record on the Tri-state grounds track Saturday night in a challenge race in 1:37 flat. Brachage, amateur driver of Webster, S. D., was second; Cliff Craft, professional, third, and Hall of Ortonville, Minn., amateur, fourth.

Horey failed to break the one mile record of 1:05 4-5 made by Allen last fall, making the mile in 1:06 4-5, the same time as in Friday's attempt.

SOLDIERS HELD READY IN FOUR OTHER STATES

Outbreak Threatened at Clinton, Illinois, Following Killing of Boy and Wounding of Two Men

SIGNALMEN HOLD UP STRIKE ORDER PENDING CONFERENCE

Railroads Secure Injunctions Against Picketing at Railway Shops

CHICAGO, Ill.—By the Associated Press.—The calling out of troops in Illinois, the assembling of soldiers in at least four other states and the intervention of the federal courts in the nation-wide strike of railway shopmen marked the close of the eighth day of the walkout.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad Saturday night secured a federal injunction here restraining picketing at the Aurora shops while earlier in the day an injunction was issued at New Orleans, restraining strikers from interfering with trains on the Southern Pacific, and at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the Burlington obtained a temporary restraining order against striking shopmen in Southern Iowa. A half dozen other railroads here were expected to follow the lead of the Burlington.

Department of justice officials at Washington were investigating a report that strike disorders were interfering with the mails.

Troops Ordered Out

Lieut.-Gov. Sterling of Illinois, Saturday ordered troops to Clinton where an outbreak was threatened following a clash between Illinois Central guards and strike sympathizers in which a boy was killed, and two men, one a striker, were wounded. A bright ray appeared through the threatening strike clouds Saturday night when D. W. Helt, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen pending the preparation and submission of a program to the United States railroad labor board.

Roads To Maintain Service

With B. M. Jewell, head of the shopmen and the labor board each standing firm in the attitude that peace overtures must come from the other, the railroads were grinding for the second week of the struggle determined to maintain uninterrupted transportation and thus break the strike.

Many roads were preparing to open their shops the first of the week, when the ultimatums to strikers to return or lose their seniority rights expire. Some carriers have applied for troops to protect employees and property in this move others are making arrangements to afford private protection to employees who remain at work and others that are being employed.

Peace Efforts Deadlocked

Efforts looking to an immediate settlement of the strike apparently stood still Saturday. Following the statement Friday of Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the labor board that the board had no power to mediate the strike so long as the men remained away from work, Mr. Jewell reiterated his assertions that the first move toward peace must come from the railroads or the labor board. Except for the disorders at Clinton, Ill., most of the day's violence was confined to clashes between strike sympathizers and workmen due to the efforts of the strike sympathizers to persuade the employees still on the job to quit.

Missouri, Kentucky, Kansas and California were among states that assembled troops or were prepared to do so in case disorders occurred.

Train Schedules Disrupted

Train schedules were further disrupted as a result of the strike, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway company announcing the annulment of forty-three trains in Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, while the Chicago & Alton abandoned all service in and out of Bloomington, Ill., due to disorders there.

Labor board members said Saturday night that they expected E. H. Fitzgerald, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, here Monday from Cincinnati to enter into negotiations with board members regarding the clerks' strike.

Confidence was expressed that an agreement would be reached by which the strike of clerks would be postponed or called off.

CHILDREN COMPOSE SONGS OF SIDEWALK FOR BOUNCING BALL

"One, Two, Three O'Larry"
Sweeps La Crosse and Nation
as Accompaniment of "Jacks"

MANY DIFFICULT STUNTS ARE PERFORMED BY LITTLE FOLK

Rhymes Supplant Mother Goose;
Inspiration in Nursery Verse

THEY'RE singing new songs of the sidewalk—the children who play in Mill street, in the Jefferson school yard and in Copeland park these days. Everybody's doing it, nearly. Every North La Crosse kid, between the ages of 4 and 12 years who can bounce a rubber ball and remember all of the little rhymes that accompany it, at least is singing the jingles.

One, two, three O'Larry
I say Doctor Cary
Stirring on a bundle—arry
Like a tiny, little fairy.

That is the way one of the jingles goes. In the spring the boys got out their marbles and the girls their rubber balls and jackstones. But "jacks" were too inactive, and they meant sitting on cold sidewalks, much to the distaste of anxious mothers, so a more vigorous game was designed for the rubber balls. The craze went from coast to coast until everywhere little girls are singing.

One, two, three O'Larry
Four, five, six O'Larry
Seven, eight, nine O'Larry
Ten O'Larry, the postman.

As poetry originated in the crude rhymes of the medieval troubadours, made up as they played their lutes before the courts of the semi-barbaric royalty, so a new set of jingles was born to the tune of the bouncing ball. Many are the stunts required of the little girl who would be an efficient O'Larry player. She must be able to bounce the ball accurately and with many variations.

For the verse just quoted the ball is dropped on each count and at "Ten O'Larry" the leg is thrown over the ball.

To the tune of

Throw open the gates and let me in,
Throw open the gates and let me in,
Throw open the gates and let me in,
So early every morning.

The hands are slapped between each bounce.

The "Jack, Jack," series has many renditions and requires skillful work on the part of the youthful player. One of the games is to catch the ball on each bounce. Another is to make the motions of slicing a loaf of bread while striking the ball. For

Jack, Jack, out the bread,
Jack, Jack, out the bread,
Jack, Jack, out the bread,
So early every morning.

The ball is allowed to bounce twice before striking it. When Jack says the little Miss Rhymster has to extend herself to all the variations of a juggler.

Here's a popular one, but one that throws bobbed locks away in the lightning changes to pantomime it all:

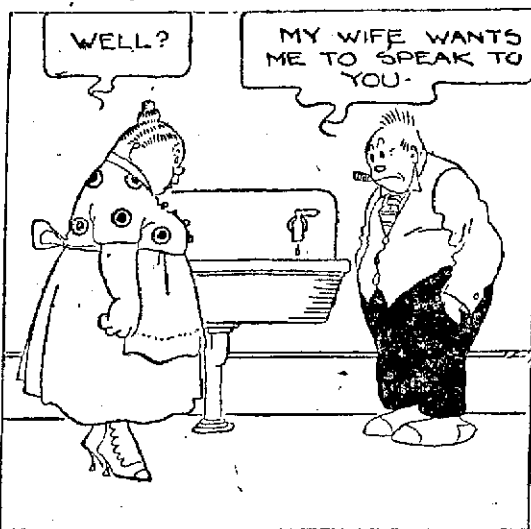

Teddy Bear, Teddy Bear turn around,
Teddy Bear, Teddy Bear touch the ground,

And so they go on and on. The imagination of the little girl can manufacture verses galore to suit her fancy. For a time O'Larry and his brother rhymes have crowded out Mother Goose, so long a favorite.

Exceptional interest has been noted in books of children's verse in the public library, according to figures obtained by Miss Lily M. E. Harrison, librarian. Books of verses at the central library and the branches have been eagerly read this spring and summer. And many of the O'Larry verses have sprung from ideas the little girls have obtained from a perusal of the Mother Goose books and other verse for little ones. It was said at the library on Saturday.

The boys gave up their marbles for baseballs, but the little girls were content with their bouncing ball.

O'Larry still lives on the sidewalks.

ART IN POSTOFFICE; NEW CAP INSIGNIA FOR THE CARRIERS

Artistic and Shining New Badges to Replace Old Ones in Short Time; 24 Badges Ordered

La Crosse mail carriers will soon be wearing shining new badges of black japanned metal instead of the old cap insignia.

An ellipse of black, mounted by an eagle with outstretched wings is the design decided upon by the postoffice officials for the new badge. The size of the insignia will be one and one-fourth inches in width and two and one-fourth inches long. The numbers will be raised and mounted on bright metal to make them legible. The number will be in the middle of the ellipse, the words "United States Postoffice" on the border above and "La Crosse, Wis." below.

The new badges will be much more artistic than the old ones, officials at the postoffice said. They will cost each carrier about 16 cents. An order has been placed for 24 badges, which will arrive in a few weeks. John H. Miller, superintendent of mail, named a committee of carriers to act on the question of new badges and the committee has sent in the order for the badges to Washington.

The Railroad Strike

THE present railroad shop strike is probably one of the most significant in the history of organized labor, because it is testing the importance of the rail labor board. This board is empowered to issue orders, but has no authority to enforce them by recourse against the persons of those who disobey, in the ordinary manner of court procedure. It has, however, certain resources of a coercive type, and perhaps a sort of moral authority. These it is attempting to employ in the present case.

There are two great factors among the issues of the strike, both of which so transcend the issue of wages specifically raised as to make the latter a mere incident.

One is the right of men peacefully to quit their employment, individually or collectively, as in a strike. Or, conversely, the right of government to compel men to work against their will. The constitutional phrase, "involuntary servitude," comes to mind. Some even use the harsher term, "slavery." This goes to the very heart of unionism, for without the right to strike, unions might as well close the shop.

The other is the vital public interest in the continuous operation of coal production and transportation. These two industries are in a class by themselves. They affect daily every home and every business. Stop them, and business stops and, shortly, suffering and death may result.

In the average strike the conflict is largely between the interests of employers and workers. In a rail or coal strike the public, which is an innocent third party, is often more seriously interested than either the employers or the workers involved in the strike.

Coal miners and railroad workers know these things. Mine owners and railroad officials know them. Mine workers care comparatively little about it. Railroad workers, educated and broadened by their constant contact with travel and their intimate knowledge of the nation's business, are as alert as their employers not to let public distress run too far. In a rail strike, each side seeks to hamper and damage the other side as much as possible with the least possible consequent damage to the public.

It is with this situation that the rail labor board is dealing. When congress refused to give the board power to enforce decrees, congress admitted in effect that it had no right to enforce employment, which is to say to prohibit strikes. Therefore the board has been attempting to keep things going by setting up a sort of contractual relationship enforceable only by pressure.

The board found that the railroads had violated a contract when they jobbed shop work to private concerns. What pressure the board will bring to bear on this point has not been disclosed. Regarding the strike as a violation of contract, the board has "outlawed" the strikers. It sets up that under the circumstances men who take the places of the workers are not strike-breakers, or "scabs." It backs the railroads in the ultimatum of a majority of them that after ten days men still on strike will lose their seniority rights. This is hitting hard. The man who has worked up to his position through 25 years of labor knows it. He must choose between losing his seniority or practically conceding that railroad strikes are to become a thing of the past.

It takes but half an eye to see grave possibilities ahead. Other railroad brotherhoods may not be deeply interested in shop and maintenance of way wages. But they are deeply interested in the right to strike. Should it appear that the present strikers could not alone face the pressure brought to bear against them, they may seriously consider a general railroad strike. With coal miners out, and working in co-operation, with a coal shortage existing and crops coming on, we should have a situation promising national disaster.

What can be done with this conflict between the right to strike and fundamental public necessities? Can a contractual system of continuous operation be maintained through government agency while mines and railroads are private property? Could continuous service be better maintained under government ownership? If so, would this be by enlistment upon terms fixed in advance, as in military service? Is the fuel and transportation necessity related to the national security in the same way as is military protection? Were that tried, could the terms of enlistment be made so favorable that men would engage in the service? Or would our civil life endure any practice borrowed from our military system?

It is difficult to agree that through the rail labor board government has approached a solution of this problem. Anything that smacks of "involuntary servitude" under private ownership will lack general public support. People not immediately affected would want to know what would be the next encroachment upon constitutional rights. Congress plainly recognized this when it decided not to empower the rail labor board to enforce its decisions by duress. Neither prophet nor philosopher can see the end. Perhaps we shall have to go on suffering the economic damage which strikes inflict upon employer, employee and public, rather than surrender an essential element of human liberty.

Meanwhile, the strike is on. Measures against violence adopted by the unions, although not fully effective in congested centers where rougher elements sometimes prevail, are a good sign that the public is not forgotten. The tendency is in the right direction, recognizing a national brotherhood of common responsibility. It may be that this sense of responsibility will save us from a return to the primitive conditions in occupation that obtained when every man grew or slew his own food and gathered his own faggots. Possibly, in time, this responsibility will develop a realization of common interests that will bring all groups and classes together in forms of co-operation which, by common understanding, will brook no interference with things vital to the public comfort and safety. That would be almost evolutionary, on our mental side. Meanwhile we shall go on, as now, "muddling through," hoping for the best, surviving crises, and on the whole constantly achieving a somewhat better state of human society.

Looks as if our ships stop at nothing beyond the spree mile limit.

Money is different from people. Idle money doesn't talk.

CHURCH NEWS

Furnished by the Church News Association

The difficulties and differences over the Palestine mandate held or at least exercised by Great Britain, the defeat of the Earl of Balfour by the Lords on one phase of that mandate, and the action of Moslems and Christians of Palestine in appealing to the Vatican, are to come before the League of Nations in July. The delivery of the matters at issue can only be appreciated at this distance by remembering the close relations of church and state in Europe, the traditional jealousies between Latins and Anglicans in matters of both religion and politics, and the added complications at this time of the influence and activity of the Eastern Orthodox church in its desire to help the Jews and to unite with the Anglicans and the Protestants of Northern Europe and the United States.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Callor, Bishop of Tennessee, has given notice to the Episcopal church that he will not accept re-election as Presiding Bishop. He has served as such for three years, and his term expires soon, when a convention meeting in Portland, Oregon, will have to choose a successor to lead the church in this country. The matter seems to be settled, for Bishop Callor has announced his purpose to return to Tennessee, and take up his work in the western part of the state, with headquarters at Memphis.

Vacation Bible schools are this summer on a wholly different basis from former years, and it is calculated in consequence the number of children in such schools will reach 500,000. The reason is that the same schools that were taken some months ago concerning these schools that was taken regarding Sunday schools. This action was that officially the large and small Protestant bodies got behind the movement. As they have never done before, they are this summer putting in workers and money, and throwing open unused buildings. Methodists are far more active than any others, where heretofore they have taken small part. The same is true of some other bodies. The Vacation school ideas are three. One is to take children off hot streets of great cities during some parts of each day, and give them useful instruction, even teach them how to play and actually have fun. A second is to put buildings otherwise standing idle into useful service. And the third is to give young men and young women, working their ways through colleges, opportunities for earning summer money by teaching in these schools. For the first time this year all principal religious bodies have representatives upon a central body in charge of and authorized to promote schools of this kind.

The scheme to reform the calendar is dead for the present, and some say it will not be revived for twenty years at least. There has just been held in Rome an International Astronomical congress, whose members were received in private audience by Pope Pius XI. This congress determined it to be inexpedient at this time to make changes, and best for the present to retain the Gregorian calendar. The reason seemed to be lack of any general demand for a change. The proposals were to make the calendar year to consist of thirteen months, twenty-eight days in each, and to fill in one day uncounted, probably at the beginning of each year. Easter was to be a fixed Sunday, the second one in April. Elaborate recommendations were made for the changes of birthdays of persons born on the 29th, 30th or 31st of any month. For some years the matter has been agitated, and the impression seems to prevail that it will come up again, although for the present it appears to be dead.

All women who become rabbis of Jewish congregations will, if graduates of a seminary, be educated at the Hebrew Union College at Cincinnati, because the action of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, in paving the way for women to enter this historic office, affects Reform Jews only. It is said the number of women to become rabbis within the next ten years will be very few, since sentiment in favor of the change is more pronounced among men than women, and since the Reform element in American Judaism is small in comparison to Orthodox and Conservative.

WASHINGTON.—Is Great Britain about to follow the example of the United States and enter into continental politics? To be sure, British isolation is itself, tradition and we have rather imitated the long-standing British habit. Yet for nearly two decades and with a persistence which finds parallel only in the Napoleonic era, Britain has concerned herself with the situation on the mainland.

From the fall of Napoleon until the opening years of the present century British isolation was constant, save with respect of a single circumstance, namely the Eastern question, in alliance with Napoleon III, Britain fought the Crimean war to restrain Russian aspirations to obtain Constantinople. A quarter of a century later, at the Congress of Berlin, following the spectacular naval demonstration in the Sea of Marjona, Britain joined Austria in vetoing the Treaty of San Stefano, which again threatened Turkish hold upon the Golden Horn.

But the eastern question interested the British in no degree as a continental question, they were looking out for their sea road to India. Russian expansion at the expense of Germany or of Austria would not have disturbed them nor have provoked their interest in European affairs. Thus, in reality, throughout the long reign of Victoria, Britain maintained a splendid isolation and in much of this time inclined to favor Germany rather than France.

Threatened by Germany In the opening years of the Twentieth century Britain came back to the continent for precisely the same reasons which had led her to oppose Louis XIV and Napoleon. She felt herself threatened by a new antagonist. The Kaiser had announced boldly that German future lay upon the blue water and the moment when Britain was paralyzed by the Boer war itself, the stress of war, began the construction of a rival navy.

The British answer was a long series of agreements with those nations which opposed Germany. The first agreement, that with France in 1904, liquidated all the outstanding colonial disputes and gave France a free hand in Morocco. This agreement put an end to many years of "pin-pricking" on the Niger, the Nile and the Mekong, and laid the foundation for the Entente Cordiale, which a decade later was to transform itself into the stress of war, into a military alliance.

The second step was an arrangement with Russia, eliminating the Russian rivalry and for the moment abolishing all British apprehension in the matter of the northern frontiers of India. This Russian settlement, much like the French, took place in 1907. Between the two had intervened the German challenges over Morocco, which demonstrated Anglo-French solidarity and almost led to war.

The Russian agreement was followed a year later by the Bosnian episode, which again threatened the peace of Europe. Three years later came Agadir and this time German defiance was complete, for the solidarity not merely of France and Britain but of Russia with these two was revealed and the Germans, still unprepared for war, postponed their action and accepted a compromise which could not conceal their diplomatic defeat.

Conclude Jap Agreement In the meantime the British had made an alliance with Japan and that alliance enabled them to recall from the Far East the fighting units of their fleet. The agreement with France, as was to be disclosed by Sir Edward Grey at a fateful moment in August 1914, enabled further concentration in home waters by devoting to France the mission of dominating the Mediterranean. At the same time, as the German menace grew ever more threatening, French and British staff officers began to collaborate in preparing plans for the use of a British Expeditionary Army on the continent in case of war and these plans bore fruit when Field Marshal French's force landed in France in 1914.

At the moment when the world war actually broke, Britain was committed to European intervention in many ways. Of course the reason for this was the long and bitter purpose of Germany to destroy the British Empire, a purpose revealed in vast amount of German writing in the years just before the conflict. Feeling herself the ultimate target of German attack, Britain felt bound upon her old policy and proceeded to ally herself in fact, although never in precise contract, with Germany's other opponents.

Once the war came, Britain was engaged on the continent to an extent unequalled in her history. When the war was over, therefore, it was inevitable that she should still take a prominent part in the affairs of the mainland, precisely as she did at Paris and Vienna after the fall of Napoleon. Up to the present hour this interest has continued. With the withdrawal of the United States, Britain and France have been left the dominant powers in Europe and they have been the great forces in the innumerable conferences and international gatherings which from the Paris conference onward have directed the current of European history.

Breach Widens Nevertheless the ever widening breach between Britain and France has served to give new force to the sentiment in favor of a return to the isolation of the Victorian era. Two lines of policy have more and more clearly presented themselves: the first a continuation of the recent method, carrying with it enduring intermixture in European affairs; the second looking to a retirement from Europe and cultivation of closer commercial and other relations with the White Dominions and with the United States.

The arguments for further international relations with the European continent are based, of course, on the double issues of politics and commerce. Today the single British policy with respect of Europe turns upon the necessity to restore the anti-war markets and thus relieve the British unemployment crisis, which remains disastrously acute. To get back the Russian and the German markets, this is the objective of all recent British foreign policy.

On the whole this policy has so far had little success. At the original Paris conference, Lloyd George made the fatal mistake of accepting terms which themselves forbade speedy economic recovery. He had recently conducted a political campaign on the single issue of making Germany pay, therefore at Paris he was condemned to reject the American policy of moderation and to insist upon reparations terms which are responsible for most of what has since happened.

The true British interest was to see reparations fixed at the lowest possible figure, that the economic recovery and the consequent restoration of foreign markets might come without delay. As for herself, Britain could not afford to accept German indemnity, because Germany could only pay in goods, and to accept the goods meant to shut down the British factories which themselves produced such goods.

Favored Reparations Cut Moreover, the second concern of the British was political; unless German reparations were placed at a low figure, that is, at a figure sufficiently low to insure German payment, then nothing was more certain than that France, once she had obtained the approval of her allies for her bill would insist upon collecting this bill by force of arms, if necessary. And such insistence meant not only the postponement of economic recovery, but meant raising a military question, the possibility of French military supremacy on the continent, which Britain did not desire.

Captive to his election pledges, however, Lloyd George at Paris agreed to the fixation of reparations figures, which instantly became and remain the one enduring barrier to economic recovery. Nearly four years after the armistice, the British unemployment total approximately 2,000,000, and aside from relatively minor fluctuations, this figure has been constant for the past two years. Meantime Lloyd George's whole continental policy has been summed up in a frantic effort to undo his Paris mistake. Doubtless he hoped at Paris that the passage of a little time would make possible a readjustment of reparations figures; certainly he counted upon American presence to support him in such an undertaking, once his own electorate had cooled down and forgotten his foolish election pledges. But America, having offered wise advice which had been rejected, went home, and George was left alone to face a Europe and particularly a France, with very different ideas.

France Keeps Army

Now, at the end of three years reparations figures have not been reduced and French hostility to any reduction remains adamant. Meantime France has demonstrated her purpose to retain her army as a means of insuring German payment, and the possession of the army has given France the dominating position on the continent. Today France can occupy any part of Germany she may choose, and there is no military force to hold her back.

Meantime Germany, rather than pay, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy; she has sent much of her capital out of the country; she has continuously inflated the costs of adjustment. As a consequence, her currency has fallen to undreamed of levels. As a consequence, she cannot buy and she does undersell. In both ways British trade is injured. So far, too, all effort to bring about a readjustment of reparations has led to Anglo-French bad feeling but to no tangible results.

It is the same with Russia. In the beginning Lloyd George joined with France in an effort to upset the Soviet government by backing the various Anti-Bolshevik leaders. But these efforts failed and then Lloyd George again, hardly understood, oversteered France and the rest of the world to go rapidly to the other extreme and recognize the Reds. In this he failed not alone or chiefly because of France, but because the United States stood solidly against such a policy. As a result all hoped for relief for the British situation flowing from a restoration of moral conditions in Russia has failed to materialize.

In this time, too, Britain, as led by Lloyd George, has gone into conflict with the smaller states. In his eagerness to forward economic recovery the British Prime Minister has revealed little patience with the aspirations of the Poles or the Rumanians and his associates have looked with ever increasing disapproval at the multiplication of small states and the so-called Balkanization of Europe.

Opposed Small States In the case of Poland, Lloyd George disclosed his whole mind toward the small states. He has endeavored on every occasion to reduce Polish territory. He approved of the Cordon Line, which would have left Russia in possession of the last session of Poland by all except the last partition. He prevented Polish and mail against Polish acquisition of any part of Upper Silesia. Moreover, at Genna he tried to raise the question of Rumanian possession of Bessarabia.

In all of this his underlying motive was clear. To take the Upper Silesian coal region from Germany was to reduce her economic strength and thus by so much diminish her capacity to buy abroad. And a transfer of the region with all the incidental disorder, would inevitably diminish its economic importance for a certain period. Therefore Lloyd George was against any change, fought it bitterly and has never forgiven the League of Nations and Benes of Czechoslovakia, who were jointly responsible for his discomfiture.

This attitude toward the small nations, however, naturally produced its reaction and at Genna he found them solidly against him on many questions. But, in reality the difference is more fundamental. Lloyd George's conception, the conception of the British who support him, is of a new Europe without armies and without alliances. He would abolish all the surviving circumstances of the war and for the old system of alliances substitute a new Pan-European association.

Oppose Pan-European Plan

Such a proposal leaves not only France, but most of the small states which were associated with the Allies in the war or obtained freedom in consequence, thoroughly cold. Rumania and Poland see a threatening Russia on the east. Poland and Czechoslovakia have a German menace to consider; Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia all have to face the frank determination of the Hungarians to restore their old kingdom at the expense of the newly born Slavs and Latins. Therefore these states stand firmly both for the retention of their armies and for a system of alliances between those who have a common interest.

Belgium on her side makes an alliance with France, because the French army is the only guarantee against another German invasion. Poland, like France, threatened by Germany, joins hands with France and with the Little Entente also. Russia and Germany on their side make the Treaty of Rapallo, which the continent sees as a military quies as much as a commercial affair.

When Britain proposes disarmament and no alliances, just a sort of Pan-European agreement, she is met by France with a demand for a guarantee against possible German attack. She is asked, in fact to preserve the vital portion of the old war-time alliance. France will reduce her army in proportion as Britain promises to send British troops to protect France, but not otherwise. Poland, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia know well that under no conditions can they expect British military assistance.

So far, then, Britain has failed completely to persuade her former allies to adopt her system of European readjustment. They will not drop alliances, they will not disband armies, because they have a lively sense of the recent past. Much less will they consent to surrender portions of their territory to placate Russia or Germany and hasten economic readjustment. Instead one sees the ever increasing number of alliances and understandings developing all over Europe.

German Pact Not Feasible

Having failed to persuade her recent allies, with the exception of Italy, who finds herself at odds both with France and with the Little Entente, and Germany momentarily at least being out of the game can find no Continental partnership to replace the old Triple Alliance. Britain would proceed to make an arrangement with Germany, but this, after all, would be to repudiate her own principles, for it is to abolish alliances that she is striving. Moreover, despite the bitterness toward France in certain quarters in Britain, I do not think any overwhelming mass of the British people are yet ready to exchange France for Germany as a partner.

Aside from this what can Britain do? Obviously she can join the French and Little Entente systems, and the actual joining is comparatively distinct. But she will have no market for her goods along the road which would bind her to participation in the next war, if it should come. And the British people are a unit against being dragged into any new war. A war on attack upon France by Germany might still bring British intervention, but even this would be bitterly opposed, and the British public is rapidly being taught that France will be responsible for any new hostilities.

Demand New Policy

But if the British will have none of either system of alliances, if they condition their participation in European affairs upon the abolition of both alliances and armaments, then it is patent that neither condition has a chance of being met, as far as one can see into the future. Europe is going to remain faithful to her old system of alliances and is going to rely upon armies to protect her liberties. Accordingly, as the fact becomes more and more unmistakable with each succeeding conference the demand within the British Isles for a new policy, based upon Overseas rather than European associations, increases.

The British fell in with Mr. Wilson's scheme of a League of Nations, in the actual drafting of which they had a large part, because it offered a way to escape from alliances and because it did to them at the moment hold out the promise of an Anglo-American partnership in world affairs. A large part of the Liberals in England had a feeling that their country had been dragged into the war as a result of commitments made by their government without their knowledge. They were never fully reconciled to participation in the war in many cases and after the war made their first drive against any renewal of the old system.

Needed U. S. Support

When the United States rejected the League, however, the whole situation changed. Without American support Britain could not bring the continent to accept any system of association with alliance and armament left out and the question of security was complicated so far as France was concerned by the problem of reparations. Moreover all efforts to obtain a revision of the Paris Treaties, of ther in their financial or territorial

Short of taking engagements, then, there is no visible means by which the British can bring the continent to take their view, and the engagements must be a sort to defeat the very policy they are aiming at, which envisages the elimination of all special understandings. On the contrary, each new world conference is marked by sharper divergences of views and therefore each conference contributes not to world peace but to world unrest. Above all, the British necessity, which properly dominates their policy, the necessity to restore world markets has, so far as Europe is concerned made little headway and seems destined to make little in the next few years.

In the end, then, it seems to me that the British will do what they did a century ago after the Napoleonic downfall. Then Europe sought British participation in that system of alliances which was framed to insure world peace and the British, seeing the alliance for what it was, with very little delay retired from the continent and staid away until the Crimean War, which was in reality an Asiatic not a European affair, in its main issue, since the British were thinking of India, not of Europe.

To Withdraw From Continent?

Better and closer relations with the United States, this has been the cardinal point in British policy for more than a quarter of a century. Now the war has opened new imperial horizons. The possibility of an attack from any Continental nation, an attack such as Germany planned, has disappeared for an indefinite period. What more natural than that Britain not suddenly but by slow degrees should withdraw from the Continental mess, since she cannot by participation serve her own ends, since the unfit economic readjustment she required cannot be had?

At all events the demand for such a course increases visibly and the advantages of intense European effort visibly diminish concurrently. Moreover, even granting that Lloyd George is to last indefinitely, which seems unlikely, the temptation for him of European adventures, such as Genna, must be reduced as he perceives that such succeeding conference his leadership becomes less and less willingly accepted. Genna, in fact broke the spell; in Poincare, present only by deputy, he encountered an opponent who surmised neither to his charm nor to his threat.

It is then, not impossible that, by one of his astonishing about-faces, Lloyd George may put himself at the head of that great and growing procession of Britons, who would return from Continental affairs and return to the Victorian tradition of isolation.

Conversation is a bore,
It's a wearisome debate,
Just because we rattle more
Than we can think or create.
We repeat, reiterate,
Till the air with words is thick;
Good words are made and sore,
Say your say—and say it quick!

Don't expect to hold the floor
While your reader and hearer prate;
Think things out a bit before
You arise and "beg to state."
Be a little more discreet,
For the point till we grow sick,
Strike a short and snappy gait,
Say your say—and say it quick!

During centuries of yore,
And at this time, present date,
Words are made and sore,
Sore at home and sore at fate;
Speech should be both clear and straight,
Why not learn to do the trick,
Brevity's a golden trait;
Say your say—and say it quick!

Easter Island's Strange Ruins
The remarkable ruins of ancient one of the mysteries of Polynesia and will probably never be solved. When it is considered that some of the stones forming the walls of these extensive are supposed to have been brought from other islands of the group across storm-tossed channels and piled in their present position with precision and mastery skill, it is ap-

the handiwork of skilled craftsmen similar to the builders of the ancient also, Africa.

LITTLE CHICKENS BY THOUSAND HANDLED IN THE PARCEL POST

La Crosse Postoffice Handles 25,000 in One Day in June; Most Come from Ohio

The casual observer at the La Crosse postoffice these days could easily be led to believe that Uncle Sam has gone into the poultry raising business. For several months there has been a veritable deluge of young chicks through the parcel post department of the local postoffice.

Beginning about April 10 last and continuing every day, chicks in lots of 1,000 or more come in every day according to John H. Miller, superintendent of mails. The rush of chick business will continue until August.

The records show that the greatest single day's business in chicks occurred on June 7 last, when 25,000 were received at the local postoffice. Most of them came from Ohio and are sent to poultry raisers in the vicinity of La Crosse. A large number of chicks have been received through parcel post by a poultry raiser and shipper near Caledonia, Minn.

Thousands of the chicks are credited to the La Crosse postoffice although they are not brought to the central office but are transferred from one train to another at the railroad stations. These are called transfers. The greatest number of chicks transferred in a single day was 2,000.

One firm in La Crosse has received as many as 1,000 to 1,500 chicks in one day.

The fish in that locality are very brilliant and are tied in great numbers about the person of the natives. Forty or fifty fishes are sometimes strung about each native. After use in this manner they are eaten.

BLAINE TURNS GUNS UPON PRESIDENT OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Governor Charges Hutton With Campaign of Misrepresentation

HITS AT CAMPAIGN TO RAISE FUNDS TO BEAT PROGRESSIVES

Likens Dry Appeal for Funds to Newberry Campaign

COLUMBIA, Wis.—Governor J. J. Blaine in a talk here last night, charged R. P. Hutton, superintendent of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, with misrepresentation in giving a statement which the governor said implied that he had pardoned scores of bootleggers and bootleggers.

"Mr. Hutton calls attention particularly to one case, that of John Ruppel of Kenosha, though—as I have said—by implication he suggests that I have pardoned scores of such offenders," the governor continued.

"The trouble with Mr. Hutton is that he doesn't stick closely to facts. It was only a short time ago that the Anti-Saloon league made an appeal to me for the campaign he is conducting, $25,000. Such appeal speaks very strongly of the odium and the corruption that prevailed in the Newberry case."

"In that case, the same type of men went into churches to spread lies, and in whispered conversations passed poison into the ears of the people. Now the churches were not supporting that campaign of corruption, but preachers were deceived and some of them joined in that campaign to deceive the people. So in this campaign of misrepresentation and deception."

Governor Blaine then went on to explain four cases where pardons were granted to persons convicted for violating the liquor laws. Three cases involved men whose families were destitute. These three men had served the larger part of their sentences. The fourth case was that of a soldier, who lost his arm in France, and who the governor said turned to making molasses in order to have a means of living.

"The man should have received work in a hospital, instead of a jail sentence," the governor said, speaking of the prisoner who had been a convict. "That man was entitled to something from his government. He got nothing but misery and we and debts and the dungeon—and I lifted him from jail and sent him home."

"And for giving this man—and these men who I have mentioned—a chance and they are making good," Governor Blaine said. "I am convinced by this man Hutton and his campaign of the committee of 11 and his candidates."

"If this is the sort of a campaign in which Mr. Hutton is engaged to save saloons, then let him pursue his campaign. I want to say now—as I shall say from every platform in this state—that I will not be intimidated by any such sinister influences as those of Mr. Hutton."

Concerning Floor Coverings
Floors are not only part of the background of the room along with the walls and ceiling, but they also form the foundation of the whole decorative scheme. Therefore, the floor coverings must necessarily be darker in color than the walls otherwise they will spoil the entire proportion of the room by the effect of brilliancy produced.—Telegraph-Herald.

MILWAUKEEAN KILLS BURGLAR TRYING TO BREAK INTO HOUSE

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—An unidentified burglar was shot and instantly killed by Valentine Gawronski, 1263 Lincoln avenue, early Saturday, when the burglar attempted to force an entrance into Gawronski's home.

Gawronski used a double-barreled shotgun, the charge entering the burglar's neck just under the chin and almost severing the head. He crumpled to the ground without a word, and when Gawronski opened the door to investigate, the man was dead.

The coroner took the body to the morgue where it awaits identification. The man was about 35, about six feet two inches tall and weighed about 200 pounds. He had high cheekbones and very thick lips. Gawronski was not arrested, but was asked to call at police headquarters to explain how the shooting occurred.

WISCONSIN FIRST IN MEETING THE CLAIMS OF INJURED WORKERS

MADISON, Wis.—Injured workmen in Wisconsin are paid compensation more promptly than in any other state, with California second, according to a statement of the industrial commission Saturday. It says that a survey of cases settled in the last half of 1921 shows that 20 per cent of the workmen receive their first payment within two weeks after the date of injury, 45 per cent within three weeks, and 61 per cent within four weeks.

The industrial commission through its system of follow up, says that it is constantly endeavoring to speed up payments to injured workmen. Several months ago it made a study of delayed payments, and advised insurance companies to improve their service. This is reported to have been done.

27TH EX-SERVICE MAN GIVEN PARDON BY THE GOVERNOR

MADISON, Wis.—A conditional pardon was granted Saturday to John J. Carroll, of Rock county, an ex-service man serving two years for driving an auto while intoxicated. Gov. J. J. Blaine, in extending executive clemency to the man, gave him freedom on condition that he take up his residence away from Rock county and change his habits.

Carroll is the twenty-seventh former soldier to receive clemency from Governor Blaine. The governor says that he has acted favorably on every application for pardon made by a

FORM ASSOCIATION TO BOOST LAWRENCE WATERWAY PROJECT

Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Auxiliary Association Incorporated in Illinois

ORGANIZATION WEST'S REPLY TO CHALLENGE OF OPPONENTS

Plan to Enlist Support of Businessmen and Corporations

CHICAGO, Ill.—By The Associated Press.—The Great Lakes-St. Lawrence auxiliary association, formed to promote the St. Lawrence seaway to the Great Lakes, announced Saturday that incorporation papers had been forwarded to the secretary of state at Springfield. In addition to a board of directors an Illinois state committee has been named and similar organizations are planned in each lake region state, it was announced.

"This auxiliary association is the west's answer to the challenge of the opponents of the St. Lawrence project who recently announced the raising of a $150,000 fund to defeat any plan tending to destroy New York's international trade throttling monopoly," Horace C. Gardner, president of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, said.

An active campaign will be undertaken immediately to enlist the financial support of the business men and corporations of the Great Lakes region, Mr. Gardner said.

"The funds thus derived will be used to enable the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association to intensify and extend its activities and combat the New York interests with their insidious anti-seaway propaganda."

clans generally are the objects of their solicitude.

"Upon the complaint, therefore, the proceedings must be considered as one to compel the defendant, by writ of mandamus, to restore the plaintiffs as members of the hospital staff and to permit them to bring their patients to and treat them in its hospital."

Staff By-Laws Not Corporation's

"It is contended on part of plaintiffs that the plaintiffs were granted the rights now denied them by the by-laws of the attending staff and that mandamus lies to compel allowance of the exercise of the rights conferred upon them by these by-laws, on the ground, I assume, that these by-laws are corporate by-laws, compliance with which may be enforced by mandamus."

"The complaint does not allege that the by-laws referred to are by-laws of the corporation. It merely alleges, paragraph sixth, that the defendant in September, 1919, created an organization known as the 'Attending Staff' and adopted a constitution and by-laws for the government of said attending staff." But whether they be by-laws of the corporation or not is in my view immaterial, as I take it that by-laws of a corporation will only be enforced by mandamus at suit of members of the corporation, to enforce their corporate rights and privileges or protect their status or members of the corporation. If a person, not a member of a corporation, be somehow aggrieved by non-compliance by the corporation with one of its by-laws, I can not conceive on what principle the writ of mandamus lies with him to compel compliance with it by the corporation.

"The complaint after stating the creation by the defendant of its attending staff and the adoption of by-laws for its government goes on to state that the defendant made plaintiffs members of such staff; that he at annual meeting, or at any other meeting, or by-laws for government of the staff might be amended, which should go at annual meeting, or at any other meeting, on notice, or without notice at any other meeting by unanimous vote of the members. The meetings and members here referred to are of the staff, not of the corporation. The corporation seemingly has no power in respect to those by-laws.

"The complaint states that the by-laws first adopted have never been amended, and are still in force, and that by them it is provided that unethical conduct shall constitute cause for expulsion from the staff; that when charges are preferred against a member he shall be notified, and shall have the opportunity to appear before the staff and the board of directors of the corporation in joint meeting in his own defense, and that a three-fourths vote of the staff shall be necessary to recommend expulsion of a member.

Claim No Charges Preferred

"It then states that no charges were ever preferred against plaintiffs, that no notice was given them of contemplated action to expel them from the staff, that three-fourths or any member of the staff did not vote for a recommendation of expulsion of plaintiffs, and that no opportunity was given plaintiffs to appear before the staff and the board of directors in opposition to motion to expel them, but that they were removed from the staff and denied admission to the hospital with their patients by arbitrary action of the defendant with view to giving Dr. Gunderson sole use of the hospital, or sole right to treat patients therein, notwithstanding they had in every way performed their duties and conducted their practice in conformity with the rules for the government of the staff.

"Out of these allegations and such others as are made I can read no more than that plaintiffs are prevented, ed, arbitrarily and without cause, from bringing their patients to and treating them in defendant's hospital. If making the plaintiffs members of the staff, in consideration of their promise to conduct themselves as set forth in the rules referred to, conferred rights upon the plaintiffs, their rights were, I think, merely contractual, and if defendant has violated these rights plaintiffs' remedy is suit for damages, unless they may at their option bring action for specific performance. No contention is made that they have the latter right, and if it were I suppose the contention would be immaterial or the motion to quash the alternative writ, although if well founded it would operate to prevent dismissal of the proceeding and authorize amendment of the complaint and continuance in equity. But I am unable to see that plaintiffs had sustained any wrongs except such, if any, as in the view of the law, response in damages will satisfy.

"Considering the case as one to compel defendant to permit plaintiffs to treat patients in his hospital, I find two cases cited in 26 Cyc. 381, notes 91 and 92, to the proposition that mandamus will not lie. The cases are not at hand for examination, but the general principle that mandamus will not lie to enforce a contractual right points to the same conclusion. I am unable to see that the claim of right to restoration to the hospital staff brings into the case any reasons for relief in this respect that do not exist in favor of the claim of right to bring patients to the hospital for treatment, that any physician in good standing, not a member of the staff, might assert. The cases cited, if directly on the proposition to which they are cited, would rule the motion in favor of defendant, as would the general proposition above stated, and the other general proposition amounting in effect to the same thing, that mandamus will not lie except to compel performance of a duty prescribed by law.

"An order will be entered quashing the alternative writ."

Belgium Gets First Payment

Germany's cash payments this year and the major part of her reparations payments for 1923 would go toward meeting the Belgian priority claims and therefore there is no concern among the French authorities regarding the effect of such a move by Germany on French finances, although the seriousness of German conditions is generally recognized.

German payment in goods may be arranged immediately under the amended Weisbaden agreement, without parliamentary approval. Premier Poincaré today told the chamber of deputies.

The premier's announcement followed criticism on the delay on utilizing the agreement which has been in final shape for the last six months and which seems unlikely to come before parliament until October.

of Chicago, is on his way to the dictator's bedside. Many times Lenin has been reported dead or dying. This time there seems to be no doubt of his serious condition. People wonder what will happen in Russia if his illness proves fatal.

Among conservatives it is felt that the country would benefit. The world has no sympathetic reaction to the death of a man who has slaughtered hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of men.

However, it is not certain that the death of Lenin at this moment would be the best thing for Russia. It was Lenin who saw and acted upon the necessity for a return to what he calls capitalism, which means the performance of the world's work by individual enterprises rather than state socialism. Few men would have had the strength to reverse themselves in face of the tremendous cost occasioned by the communistic adventure. If the death of Lenin means the dictatorship of Trotsky, the militarist, one need not be too sure that civilization would be the winner.

THE disarmament commission of the league of nations is considering a plan for the reduction of European armaments. It proposes a reduction of the total armed institutions of Europe to approximately a million men, which would mean a substantial economic saving to the continent.

THE Oregon government won a decided victory in the election during the week, gaining substantial control of both houses of congress. Activity of bandits was confined to the murder of a woman by robbers in the Mexican oil fields. Federal troops immediately took up the pursuit. It appears that the Mexican government has made substantial progress in restoring law and order.

GOVERNOR BLAINE, in a speech at Portland Tuesday night, announced that the Wisconsin General hospital will be built. Building of the hospital was authorized during the administration of Governor Philipp and the legislature made the appropriation. Some time since, Governor Blaine announced that it could not be constructed owing to lack of funds. The regents protested, pointing out that the legislature had ordered the work done and had made the appropriation, and insisting that the law must be carried out. Conferences were held with the governor. There was talk of mandamus proceedings. It is said that at his last meeting with the regents Governor Blaine advised them that it would be impossible for him to give a definite answer until he had received the state's fiscal statement June 30. In his speech Thursday night, announcing that he would proceed, Governor Blaine said that the recovery of unreported income taxes had been sufficient to enable the state to proceed with the building.

In an address at La Crosse the governor said that the recovery of unreported income taxes had enabled him to place large sums in the soldiers' bonus fund.

The governor and the tax commission are to be commended for the diligent efforts to recover full taxes from tax dodgers and from any who had made errors in their income tax returns. That, indeed, is the sworn duty of the governor and of the commission, to perform which the state has equipped them with both money and personnel. It is good, too, to observe that the governor appreciates the importance of the hospital to Wisconsin, and that he is interested in funds for the soldiers' state enterprises.

However, both the hospital and the soldiers' fund are covered by legislation. They were not made contingent upon the recovery of evaded taxes or upon anything else. It was mandatory upon the officials to carry out the plan of the state legislature. There is no political capital in it for anybody. If there were, it would go to former Governor Philipp. In the legislature and to the board of regents. To the latter especially in that they helped to father the great enterprise, and brought pressure to bear upon Governor Blaine when he sought to delay construction. It is nobody's duty to the state; it is a big and important public enterprise which the public has bought and which the taxpayers will pay for.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MORGAN is pursuing his campaign through the state. He fired his "opening gun" at Eau Claire. Perhaps the most significant thing at this meeting is the large percentage of women who attended it.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE is expected to return to the state shortly. Those who know the senator have no doubt that he will breeze quickly into his "wildwind campaign." He will draw large audiences. He will thrill them with dramatic oratory. He will appeal to them by touching every string in which they are interested. He will set a fast pace for his opponent, Dr. Ganfield. Probably he will not make much of an appeal for the socialist vote—he already has that by the default of the socialist convention. His friends are confident of his re-election by a large majority. They are far less confident about the La Follette state ticket.

SENATOR NEW, defeated for the republican nomination in Indiana, by former Senator Beveridge, bull moose progressive, in a speech in the senate announced a nation-wide fight against the primary laws. Reason enough for Senator New—the primary defeated him. Strange that men in public life can so far misjudge public sentiment. No doubt the campaign of Senator New against the primary will wind up with a net product of zero. Few people will agree that the defeat of New by Beveridge is an indictment of the primary system.

IOWA WILL FIGHT EFFORTS TO BOOST CORN FREIGHT RATE

DES MOINES, Iowa.—Any effort on the part of the railroads to increase freight rates on corn to a parity with wheat will be resisted to the limit by middle west state railroad commissions, D. N. Lewis, of the Iowa railroad commission, declared Saturday.

Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota, Missouri and Illinois commissions will be represented at a conference to be held in St. Paul July 31, to plan concentrated opposition before the interstate commerce commission.

When the grain rate reduction was obtained some months ago, the wheat rate was cut 12 per cent and the corn rate 10 per cent. Now the railroads are trying to get the corn rates the same as the wheat rate, it is stated by Mr. Lewis.

COAL CONFEREES AT CAPITAL MARK TIME OVER THE WEEK-END

Cabinet Officers Participating in Conference Report to President Upon His Return

WASHINGTON.—By the Associated Press.—Alignments in the coal strike situation appeared substantially unchanged Saturday night upon the return to Washington President Harding, who convened representatives of the operators and miners here on Monday in the hope that a settlement might be reached. The return of the president gave an opportunity for the cabinet officers who have participated in pending settlement efforts to make reports, while anthracite operators and union officials from the anthracite fields were leaving for the capital for the week-end.

Secretaries Hoover and Davis, who have sat in the bituminous conference, held a lengthy discussion of the matter but in government quarters silence was maintained as to prospects of action. An impression prevailed that the bituminous action of the conference might come to at least temporary suspension Monday, with its original disagreement, in which the union seeks national or semi-national wage negotiations and the operators tender district negotiation uncompromisingly defined.

strength of the Illinois national guard, under arms Saturday night, the state, in the words of Col. Frank L. Taylor, in charge of the adjutant general's office, was "an armed camp, prepared for any contingencies" in the railroad shutouts strike.

From Rockford in the north to Cairo in the south troops were assembled.

The entire strength of the guard, except for three Chicago units and scattering units of the 130th infantry, were mobilized.

Orders for the mobilization came from Acting Governor Fred Sterling at Rockford. The troops were ordered to have in readiness their field equipment and to take plenty of revolver and rifle ammunition.

May Move Shops

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—Great Northern car repair shops here and at Devils Lake, N. D., may be removed to St. Cloud, Minn., unless striking shopmen return to work soon, officials of the Dakota division announced Saturday night. They said they had received orders from St. Paul to inform the people of Devils Lake to this effect and that the same situation would prevail here.

Arrangements were made for the workers to live at the shops to protect them from any possible annoyance by pickets who remained quietly near the shops.

Although none of the strikers have returned to work officials of the railroad claim that all necessary work on the division is being done and that the shops will be running as normal in another week.

Militiamen at Clinton

CLINTON, Ill.—Companies A and H of the Thirtieth Illinois infantry arrived here Saturday night and are guarding all railroad property with rapid fire guns. Although other troops are expected, trouble appears to have abated and the situation is believed to be well under control.

A meeting of the strikers was held Saturday night.

First trouble in the railroad shopmen's strike occurred here Saturday when a guard employed by the Illinois Central railroad shot and killed James Fitzgerald, a 12-year-old boy, wounded his father, James Fitzgerald, Sr., a striker, by shooting him through the leg and wounded a passerby, Elmer Frankson. The latter was shot through the legs.

It is said the trouble started when the guard told a number of strike sympathizers to keep off the right way, and declaring he would "shoot the first man who stepped over the dead line." Fitzgerald, it is claimed, stepped over, whipped out a pistol and invited the guard to "begin shooting."

Boy is Killed

The boy died shortly after being wounded. He was shot through the right lung. The father and Frankson were taken to the hospital here for treatment.

Early in the evening about 600 strikers and strike sympathizers were collected near the Illinois Central shops. The railroad guard who fired the shots was arrested by Sheriff Petersen. The sheriff and two of his deputies immediately took him out of the county.

All men working at the Clinton shops have deserted their jobs and the guards stationed at the shops have fled. Feeling is still at fever pitch and it would not take much, residents claim, to start another outbreak.

Signalmen Delay Walkout

CHICAGO, Ill.—By The Associated Press.—Strike orders to 14,000 railroad signal men will be withheld pending the preparation and presentation to the United States railroad labor board of a program acceptable to the executive council of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen of America, N. V. Helf, president of the signalmen's organization, announced Saturday night.

Mr. Helf issued the statement after conferences here Saturday between W. L. McMenimen, labor member of the board and the signalmen's executive council.

Mr. Helf's action marks the second time within a week that labor board members have asserted additions to the ranks of striking shopmen.

WISCONSIN AT WASHINGTON By Betty Pruett Farrington

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Plans for the campaign against Senator Robert M. La Follette this fall were discussed here by Senator Irvine L. Lenroot and Dr. William Ganfield, the candidate of the Committee of Forty-Four who will oppose the senior senator in the primary campaign.

Dr. Ganfield literally slipped into Washington one day and out the next. He was accompanied by State Senator Skogmo, of River Falls, but during his visit here was the guest of Senator Ernst, republican, of Kentucky. Mr. Ernst for many years has been a trustee of Center College, Kentucky, of which Dr. Ganfield was president. Their friendship is said to have had its inception when Dr. Ganfield first went to Center College.

During his conference with Mr. Lenroot, Dr. Ganfield discussed the issues of the approaching campaign, leaving for Wisconsin with all the material for the forthcoming fireworks. Senator Skogmo, who is secretary of the Committee of Forty-Four, left the day after Dr. Ganfield.

Mr. Lenroot returned from New Jersey the day following the Fourth. With Mrs. Lenroot, he spent the week-end at the beautiful country estate of Senator Frelinghuysen at Raritan. He went with the New Jersey senator on the Fourth to Ocean Grove where they both made speeches to a crowd of about 6,000 persons.

The republican petition for cloture presented to the senate on Wednesday evening by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, chairman of the finance committee, contained the name of Mr. Lenroot among 52 republicans who did not sign the petition. The junior senator was one of those instrumental in the movement to bring about a limitation of debate on the tariff bill. Mr. La Follette served notice previously that he would not be deterred by such movements from fully discussing those provisions of the tariff bill which merited special attention.

The presentation of the cloture petition was followed by the most important conference of republican leaders since those on procedure on the soldiers' bonus bill. Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, majority leader, numbered Mr. Lenroot among the administration's leaders whom he called into conference at his home. The Wisconsin senator was one of about ten outstanding senators who took dinner with Mr. Lodge for a discussion of the plans on the tariff bill, soldiers' bonus bill, and ship subsidy bill with particular reference to the forthcoming campaign.

Among the 21 experts who are now preparing the program of the World's Dairy Congress to which President Harding has invited other nations to send representatives, are Dr. H. C. Taylor and Dr. E. V. McCollum who were identified for a long time with the University of Wisconsin. The resolution authorizing the president to call the conference was sponsored in congress by Representative Edward E. Browne, of Waupaca.

Dr. Taylor, who has been made a member of the sub committee on Industry and Economics, is now chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. He was formerly professor of Agricultural Economics of the University of Wisconsin and is regarded as one of the country's foremost authorities in his field.

Dr. McCollum has been named to the committee having charge of the program on National Health. Prior to going to Johns Hopkins university where he is now in charge of the Department of Chemical Hygiene, Dr. McCollum gained a nation-wide reputation with his research on nutrition, conducted to a great extent through experiments on rats.

Protesting against the increase in the tariff on almonds as proposed by Senator Johnson, of California, and adopted, Mr. Lenroot, quite unexpectedly sounded this warning:

"I have not made up my mind as to whether, when we come to a final vote upon this bill, I shall vote for it or not. I want to do so, if I can. I want to resolve all doubts in favor of the bill; but at such rates as this are to be voted into this bill to a considerable extent I want to say very frankly that I shall not support the bill when it comes to final passage. I want to stand for a reasonable protective rate. I want to stand for protection—I do stand for protection—to American industries; but, I have no sympathy with this system which seems to prevail here, that if the interests of the Senator in his State demand exorbitant duties, that Senator can go and ask and receive and then, because of the interrelationship of the duties throughout this bill, that Senator will vote with the committee for every increase that may be proposed. I do not propose to do that."

The questionnaire sent to persons engaged in the oil industry by Mr. La Follette as chairman of the committee in charge of the Senate's investigation of the price of gasoline was made public by the Senator. It is expected to stir up quite a protest owing to the requests made for the corporate relations of the different firms and the names of the stockholders. The reply to these questionnaires, which cover many phases of the oil business, is expected to furnish the basis for the committee's report.

DULUTH PLANNING A GREAT HOMECOMING FOR WALTER HOOVER

Mayor to Declare Holiday to Honor Duluth Man Who Wins World Sculling Title

DULUTH, Minn.—By The Associated Press.—Plans were taking shape here Saturday night for the great home coming celebration to be accorded Walter Hoover, who by virtue of his victory over J. Beresford, Jr., in the Diamond sculls event of the English Henley, was crowned king of the world's amateur scoullers.

Mayor S. F. Snively said he would declare a holiday "and several of them" if it was necessary for the occasion.

Officials of the Duluth Boat club immediately began arranging a suitable date for the affair and had virtually decided to stage the celebration the week of July 23.

Hoover sailed from England July 12 and is expected to arrive home about July 21.

Band of Irregulars Massed South of Dublin Being Driven Further from Capital

LITTLE SERIOUS RESISTANCE OFFERED TO ADVANCE OF ARMY

Insurgents Suffer Loss of Many of their Best Leaders

DUBLIN.—By The Associated Press.—The force of irregulars mustered south of Dublin has fled before the advance of the national troops, and the menace of fighting before the capital is further removed. The base of the irregulars at Blessington, from which they were despatched last night throughout the countryside, was captured by national forces early today, and the main body of the irregulars is on the run in the Wicklow hills.

The insurgents withdrew from Blessington without resistance, the occupation of the village entailed no casualties on either side.

The nations encountered serious resistance only at Ballymore Eustace, where they suffered some minor casualties. The irregulars fell back on their base, losing several small detachments. When the cordons on the south and west were within a mile of them they slipped away into the wilder part of the Wicklow hills.

The irregulars have lost their best leaders, including Andy Macdonald and Jerry Doland. Jerry is the brother of Harry Boland, the Valera's former secretary. He arrived in a motor to inspect one of the outposts, but drove directly into the hands of the nationals, who were in possession of it.

COCOANUT TREE'S MAIN USES

The green coconut furnishes to the South Sea Islander drink and delicate meat like the white of a soft-boiled egg. The ripe nut furnishes the copra of commerce, food for man either raw or grated and mixed with other foods, as well as food for fowls and pigs and fish bait. It provides oil for the hair and skin, an essential part of the natives' toilet. The dried and peeled shells make water bottle and oil flasks.

The fiber which surrounds the nut in the husk is twisted into cord, used for every purpose where cord or rope is needed, such as binding together the rafters and posts of huts, and the timbers of canoes.

The sap dripping from the severed flower stalk is sweet roddy, which fermented becomes soma toddy, an intoxicant. The unopened leaves in the crown of the tree make a delicate white salad, the "sailors' cabbage" of the old whaling days. As this can only be obtained by killing the tree, while people call it "millionaire's salad," owing to the valuation of trees.

The sheath at the base of the leaf (stipule) resembles a coarse sack and is used for wrapping the grated meat in the crude oil press. The leaf makes an outside layer for the thatch, a coarse basket, broad coarse mat for the floor and for hanging on the weather side of huts. The nut is used for fence palings and house walls. The dried leaves are bound together and tied with green ones for torches. A strip of leaf is bound around a tree trunk acts as a gutter for rain-water and a piece of leaf is attached to the trunk in a certain way is a trespass notice. The trunk of the tree is used for posts and rafters of huts.

GRANT CENTENNIAL COINS GO BEGGING FOR BUYERS HERE

Gold Dollars and Silver Half Dollars, to Commemorate Birth, Find Few Purchasers

General Grant Centennial gold dollars and silver half dollars, received in La Crosse are going begging for purchasers; people think they are merely souvenirs and are not purchasing them, when in reality they are honest-to-goodness money, legal tender, hard cash of the realm, etc., and so on.

At one bank in La Crosse it was said that only a few of the centennial pieces have been disposed of. They have been on sale for several weeks.

The coins commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of General Grant. These coins were minted for the benefit of the Grant Centennial Association of Indianapolis, Ind., which is selling them at premiums; after the idea of the Pilgrim half dollars in Massachusetts, the proceeds from the sale will be going to construct a fire-alarm Grant highway and two municipal buildings, the latter in the town.

The issue of silver half dollars is being handled exclusively by the First National Bank of Cincinnati, it was said at the State Bank of La Crosse, which is one of the banks handling the issues. This Cincinnati bank has control of the entire output on behalf of the association, which is limited to 10,000 of the gold issue and 250,000 of the silver issues. The gold issues are divided into two sections, the first bearing the last of Grant on the face, while the reverse carries a replica of Grant's campaign. These sell for $3 apiece. The second 5,000 of the gold issue is similar in design to the first except for the addition of one star, which presumably represents General Grant's rank in the army. These sell for $2.50 each. The silver half dollars sell for a dollar each. After the coins were minted the dies were destroyed.

JUDGES' SALARIES

Judges' salaries have not been very responsive to the course of the cost of living, but during 1921 nine states increased the compensation of the judges of their supreme courts. Pennsylvania is the most liberal, paying the judges of its highest court $5,000 more a year than the judges of the United States supreme court receive. If New York votes favorably next fall upon constitutional amendment, the members of its highest court will be on an equality in compensation with the Pennsylvania judges. Of course, judicial salaries in the United States do not compare with those paid in England, where the chief justice receives almost three times the salary paid to the chief justice of the United States supreme court. Even Canada pays its chief justice $500 more a year than the corresponding salary in the United States.—The Nation's Business.

CAMP COMFORT

TOURISTS' ENJOYING MODERN COMFORTS

BY LEON A. DICKINSON
Manager Touring and Transportation
Bureau, American Automobile
Association

Many and varied are the devices now available for the comfort and convenience of the rapidly increasing army of motor car campers.

Three or four years ago, when this army was in its infancy, camp equipment manufacturers had not awakened to its possibilities and, in consequence, could supply only standardized goods adapted primarily to the needs of sportsmen and stationary vacationists. They were designed mainly for strength and durability, the matter of compactness and lightness having been deemed of secondary importance. Just as soon as motor camping passed the experimental stage and attained popularity with motorists everywhere, it began to be recognized that a need existed for tents and other camping parapheralia especially designed for automobile transportation.

Anyone who doubts the success of the intense application of many trained mechanical brains to this task has only to visit the nearest camp-outfitter and he will come away convinced that this new sport or pastime is destined to acquire an ultimate importance second only to that of motor touring itself.

Entirely aside from the question of tents and trailers, which is important enough to warrant cogent and more detailed treatment, there are numerous other devices designed to assist in the necessary daily functions of camp life, yet ingeniously constructed to minimize weight and bulk.

In the matter of sleeping accommodations, for instance, there are available not only the tent and bed, combined in one piece, but also air mattresses, wool sleeping bags and amazingly ingenious folding cots.

A certain amount of open air cooking is inevitable with any camping party, and numerous ingenious articles are now available for facilitating this important and necessary business. In the realm of cook stoves alone there are literally dozens of varieties to choose from, heat being derived from gasoline, acetylene gas, kerosene, alcohol, wood and even from a group of synthetic, inflammable solids popularly known as "canned heat." Aluminum is the favorite metal for cooking utensils and cutlery, mainly because of its light weight, but partly also owing to its almost complete freedom from oxidation.

Light and Handy

Some of the folding chairs, tables, buckets, wash basins, bath tubs, boats and other necessary adjuncts of a life in the open are veritable marvels for accomplishing their respective purposes in a satisfactory manner, and at the same time occupying a minimum of space in transport.

Experienced campers always carry a compact little machine kit containing such standard remedies as quinine, aspirin, castor oil, iodine and bicarbonate of soda; likewise bandage, absorbent cotton, adhesive plaster and tourniquets for first aid in case of accidents.

Last, but not least, is the matter of proper clothing. The two essentials are waterproof outer and woolen undergarments. Proper footwear is of vital importance, the best combination being woolen socks and moose-casing.

Women are coming to wear practically the same clothing as men for autocamping, false modesty in this respect being now a thing of the past.

Scientists declare there is no injury left following X-ray exposure.

Ours is the wet wash way—a highly practical service.

And it costs but little—less, even, than it costs you to do your washing at home, yourself.

You send us your family bundle. We return it damp, but sweet and clean beyond compare. In short, we relieve you of all the heavy toil of rubbing and leave only the lighter tasks of drying and ironing.

Our methods, too, will meet your approval. Everything is washed in water as soft as an April shower—in water that is kept constantly pure. During every washing we change the water as many as eight times.

Why let washday be a problem? You'll find it much simpler, and much more economical in time, labor and money to send your family bundle to us. Telephone, or mail us a card, and our driver will call.

What About Irritated Nerves?

Nerves are irritated long before the body may appear to be sick.

Sleeplessness, loss of appetite, lack of vitality and many other conditions are indications of this. And they are danger signals.

When the frame-work of the body begins to pinch or squeeze a nerve the first effects may appear only as inconveniences. But the final effect will be the lowering of natural resistance in the parts affected by that nerve.

And when disease germs attack it—the defenses are too weak to throw them off.

This is why the Osteopath is so careful to keep all nerve channels free from unnatural pressure. And this is the purpose of his manipulations.

Remember that the purpose of osteopathic manipulation is to free the channels that carry the energy and food upon which life is dependent.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Between Hokah and Caledonia 13 miles of state trunk highway No. 44 will be gravelled at an estimated cost of $75,000 during the present construction season, according to Charles M. Babcock state highway commissioner.

A call for bids on this and 28 other projects will be made at once, it was officially announced, following action by congress toward providing additional federal highway aid. The new allotment, however, will be only half that of each previous year and the cut costs the Minnesota trunk highway fund nearly $1,500,000.

Highway officials said that the new funds will be put on the roads without delay that early benefits may be given the highway users.

Nearly all the new money will be used for grading and graveling sections of the state trunk routes, according to the program announced today. The totals are more than 120 miles of gravel-surfacing and 96 miles of grading, and the total of estimated costs approximates $1,440,000. Proposed improvements are widely distributed over the state under the continued policy of spreading betterments to the largest possible number of localities.

The Minnesota State highway department has ordered the construction of Highway No. 9 running between the villages of Houston and Rushford. This will add another good road to Houston County's ever growing list.

The village of Junction City, 11 miles northwest of Stevens Point known throughout the state as a speed trap, has removed its speed patrolman for the season and is extending a welcome hand to motorists. Public sentiment in the village resulted in petitions asking for the resignation of Vul Jashinski, the patrolman. The village board held a meeting and decided to remove him and also to abolish the office.

During a busy seven weeks Jashinski arrested 100 alleged offenders, practically all of whom were $12.70 poorer when leaving the village. Motorists asserted he would take them into custody on the slightest provocation of speed law violation, when the 15-mile limit was barely being exceeded. Jashinski denied all of these charges. Automobile business at the junction took a decided slump when the story of the policy of rigid law enforcement spread about the county and state.

Drivers avoided the village and it was predicted that by the end of the summer state trunk line 18, which passes down the main street of the village, would be little more than a cow path, so far as tourist travel was concerned, unless the village officials changed their attitude and policy. Garages here put up warning signs notifying tourists to drive with extreme care when passing through the junction, but still the offenders continued to be haled into justice court, sometimes at the rate of six or eight a day. It is now promised that motorists who use ordinary judgment in passing through the village will not be molested. Two La Crosse motorists were held up by the traffic cop in Junction City in June and forced to pay a fine.

PREMIUM ON BOY BABIES OFFERED IN MONTENEGRO

Government Takes Steps to Check Alarming Decrease in Birth Rate

CETINJE, Montenegro. — There has been an alarming decrease in the birthrate of Montenegro, due to the loss during the war of so many of the "Black Mountain's" fighting men. The government is offering premiums to mothers who bear male children. The females now greatly outnumber the males.

The incentives offered by the government to mothers of male children have resulted in pathetic appeals from the untutored peasant women to the American Red Cross nurses to give them "some medicine to make a boy."

In Montenegro boys are considered much more valuable than girls, and the constant prayer of the mountain dweller is that she may be blessed with a male child. This disparity in the sexes is largely the outgrowth of the days when Turkey held dominion over the Balkans and when the liberty-loving Montenegrins had an ever-present need of men to defend the homeland.

In Montenegro the women do all the work, the men considering manual labor undignified. They feel it their chief duty to carry firearms and swords, talk politics, and prepare for the next war.

You want more BATTERY and less SERVICE

Battery service is a bug-bear. What is useful to you is continuous, uninterrupted performance. You want to have a battery installed in your car and drive away, happy in the knowledge that it will be a ready reservoir of energy whenever you need it.

The Ray Battery gives guaranteed performance because of its famous Lavier Formula plates—the greatest advance in battery construction since the discovery of the wet cell. They are hard, to withstand the strain of service—highly porous to react quickly and surely to the electrolyte.

Studebaker Bodies Don't Rattle or Squeak

Studebaker bodies rest squarely on the chassis frame—not on the body sills. The body and the frame form a rigid unit that successfully resists the rack of the road.

Studebaker bodies are built in Studebaker shops by men, many of whom have been building vehicle bodies for Studebaker for upwards of 30 years—and their fathers before them. Studebaker has been building fine bodies for seventy years.

Studebaker Special-Six bodies, because of their quality and soundness, weigh more than those of other cars around the Special-Six price. You cannot skimp in material and build a body that will not rattle.

Freedom from rattle or squeak is just another of the fine-car refinements that emphasize the extra value of the Studebaker Special-Six.

The Special-Six chassis frame is 7" deep. It tapers from a width of 29" in the front to 41" in the rear, so that the sides of the body fit perfectly without overhang. Five cross-members prevent the distortion that eventually causes bodies to squeak.

PASTOR AT RACINE PLACED UNDER BONDS TO KEEP THE PEACE

Attempted to Secure Revolver to be Carried to Sunday Services

RACINE, Wis.—Peace bonds in the sum of $500 were signed by Rev. John B. Piette, pastor of St. Rose Catholic congregation, shortly before noon Saturday, following a trial before Judge Burgess of a charge that he attempted to secure a revolver to be carried by him at last Sunday's services.

It was further alleged in the complaint upon which the warrant was based that Dennis Fitzgerald, trustee of the church, feared that Father Piette would cause him and other members of the congregation personal injury.

Father Piette acted as his own attorney in the case, cross examined several witnesses produced by the complainant and made his argument to the court at the conclusion of the trial which lasted more than an hour.

Judge Burgess ruled at the close of the case that he thought that the purpose of the proceeding had been accomplished by the publicity given and accepted a recognizance signed by the priest.

Father Piette in his testimony admitted that he had sought to borrow a revolver, stating he did not intend to use it, but only wished to brandish it as a means of protecting the women and children in the church in the case of a recurrence of disorders.

Fitzgerald in his statements alleged fear of personal harm from Father Piette, and recited an alleged occurrence which took place in the home of the priest when Father Piette said: "I'll get you. I'll show the people what you are."

Witness further testified that Father Piette placed his right hand in his hip pocket at the time.

It was explained that supplemental proceedings would be held on Friday.

TIME FOR TARIFF REVISION IS NOT YET--LA FOLLETTE

Badger Senator Renews Attack on Administration Bill in Senate Saturday

WASHINGTON.—Renewing his attack on the tariff bill, Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, told the senate Saturday that this was not the time to make a general revision of the tariff, that conditions were changing so rapidly that rates approved now would be out of date before the bill could be placed on the statute books.

Senator La Follette inveighed against the system of tariff making which he said had obtained for a quarter of a century; a system by which he continued, "the tariff grabbers" come before the senate finance committee to give expert statements as to conditions in their industries and to state what rates they desired. When the pending bill was written he added, business was depressed and consequently the manufacturers asked for the highest possible rates in the hope that high protection would remove the depression.

The speaker argued that the tariff commission should be relied upon to gather facts scientifically for congress. Senator Edge, republican, suggested a "scientific tariff" with a law giving the commission broader authority but Senator La Follette declared the commission had all the authority necessary now; that the trouble was that world economic con-

PRINTER TRYING TO MAKE FIGURES LIE SAYS MORGAN

Answers Atwood Statement that He Spent More than Others
for State Printing

RICE LAKE, Wis.—Attorney General William J. Morgan, candidate for governor of Wisconsin, Saturday answered the statement of David Atwood, state printer, that as attorney general he had expended more for printing than any of his predecessors. Mr. Morgan charged that the state printer was trying to make figures lie.

Pointing out that Mr. Atwood was an appointee of Governor J. J. Blaine whom he is opposing for re-election, Mr. Morgan declared that as state printer, Atwood had complete control of the price that was paid for printing for the attorney general. He reiterated that he had saved $5,000 by refusing to print monthly pamphlets which the state printer had said would cost $800 a month if published.

"When I get back to Madison," Attorney General Morgan said, "I'll tell the people how much under Atwood's contracts it cost the state to publish each of those books which the law says must be published, and people will be surprised at the number of pages of the official opinions for 1920 and what they cost and the number of pages for 1921 and what they cost."

"All the tax wasters who know they ought to be separated from the payroll for their state's good will be against me in this campaign," he continued. "The political officers whose jobs I want to abolish will be against me, too."

No Rules About Sleeping Periods
A London doctor who has given the matter some extended investigation has come to the conclusion that there is no rule to be followed about hours of sleep, and there is no reason, he says, why a woman should have more sleep than a man. It is a matter for the individual.

One person gets as much benefit out of a habitual five hours' sound sleep as many another derives from eight or nine hours, lighter slumber for quality of sleep is as important as quantity, a point that is often overlooked.

THE WALRUS

"The time has come the Walrus said
To talk of many things
Of cabbages and ships
Of walrus and seals
Of cabbages and kings."

BY C. A. W.

The fire babies at central station are growing. The chief and all the boys who spend their working hours in station No. 1 admit it. The fire babies are growing and there are a number of vacant stalls in the rear of the building. The boys listen in vain for the clump of hoofs on the wooden floor for the plaintive whinnies of the fire babies. Chief, Matt and Last. No more will the fire fighters at this station see the handsome horses, with white necks and snapping eyes, run to their wagons as their doors open at the first clang of the fire alarm. At night time it is especially lonesome, for the boys enjoyed petting a warm head as the engine uttered a whiny of thanks and buried its nose in a peek of oats. "The motor apparatus is wonderful and we should feel elated over the improvement in our fire fighting apparatus, but right now we miss our pets," said the chief. "We're lonesome, that's all."

Why doesn't the city have highway patrolmen to look after the streets every day like patrolmen in the rural districts care for their roads? A prominent citizen asked this question a few days ago in one of the down town cigar stores where a group of traveling salesmen, autoists and others were having a general discussion. Strangely, no one could answer the question, or in other words none could offer any good reason for the city not having highway patrolmen. But every man in the conference agreed it would be a good move for the board of public works or council to arrange to hire two or three good men, engage a horse and wagon, load the vehicle with gravel, a bucket of hot tar and a few other needed supplies and turn them loose on the city streets with instructions to fill up and smooth over every hole they find in the improved thoroughfares. An outfit of this sort could save thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of La Crosse every year and save thousands of autoists from jolts over holes which are all to plentiful. When a small hole is started in a street, every car passing over it chips off a little more of the top surface, and inside of a week or two a cavity is created which is calculated to jar the back bone and nerves of all motorists who chance that way. The city highway patrolmen could stop all this at small cost and keep the streets in top-notch condition. Proposals of this plan declare. It's just another exemplification of the old "stitch in time" adage.

Three or four weeks ago I had occasion to refer to Phil Pederson and a few other ambitious citizens who find fault in arising with the sun during these beautiful summer days, work almost a half day's work before most of us have breakfast. Since the publication of that little bit of gossip I have learned there are a number of well known citizens who belong to the Early Birds' club. It's worth the price to arise at 4:30 some nice morning and take a hike or drive out around the edges of the town to see how many persons can be found at work in gardens or yards at that hour. If you haven't counted them, you will be surprised. It will

PIONEER TOURING CAR OF CITY AND FIRST FIRE DEPARTMENT MOTOR STILL IS ABLE TO RUN

Knox Car. Presented City by L. C. Colman in 1912 Still in Running Order

SOMEWHAT the worse for age but still a first class auto for the shape it is in.

That's what they say in the fire department when someone mentions the first automobile ever owned and operated by the La Crosse fire department—the Knox car, a deluxe six cylinder in its day, presented to the city in September 1912 by L. C. Colman.

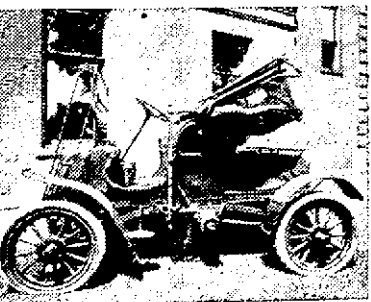

Attention was directed toward the old car last week when two pieces of the ultra-modern fire fighting apparatus arrived at central fire station to replace the seven horses and two horse-drawn vehicles, a steamer and a hook and ladder truck. This particular Knox was one of the first automobiles to roll over the streets of La Crosse. It was purchased at a time when autos were a novelty and Mr. Colman was among the early owners of cars in the city.

It is air cooled with a two-cylinder horizontal opposed engine. Part of the engine is under the front of the car and the rest in the rear. No crank in the engine is agitated from the center of the axle. The picture shows where the car is cranked and also shows the control, a long rod that is nearly as tall as the steering wheel. The hoodlike arrangement under the windshield and where engine is in modern cars, is a fold-down seat that will accommodate two persons and which may be folded when not in use.

But no matter what may be said for or against the car, there is one thing in its favor by a wide margin, according to Fire Chief McGlaughlin, and that is its easy riding qualities. The body of the car is supported by two sturdy yet flexible side springs, one of which shows in the accompanying picture, and they take the "bumps" out of the bumps one encounters on the highways while out motoring.

The old Knox was used by Chief Bradford for three years when the city bought a modern car for the chief in 1915. The veteran fire car is now in storage at Station No. 3, Sixth and Mississippi streets. It still is in first class condition and needs only a little gasoline and it would be off to the races again.

WINNEBAGO INDIANS IN WISCONSIN SEEK LANDS IN NEBRASKA

Hearings Held at Black River Falls to Prove Titles and Heirships to Estates

PROPERTIES NOW WORTH FROM $25,000 TO $50,000

"Worthless" Land in 1866 Now Worth $200 or More an Acre

TOMAH, Wis.—Little did the Wisconsin band of Winnebago Indians imagine that good results would ever follow the scorned lands granted by the government to them more than a half century ago. Within the past month, the heirs of the generation which left Nebraska to return to Monroe and Jackson counties, Wisconsin, have been frantically endeavoring to prove titles and heirships to those now valuable lands.

Experts from the Indian department have just closed a lengthy session at Black River Falls in the interests of claims to Indian lands and possible fortunes. Unexpected and most unusual complications have arisen from the decision of the government to settle in the year 1866 all Winnebago Indians within the boundaries of Wisconsin, on the northern half of the Omaha reservation, Nebraska. A quarter section or one hundred sixty acres of timber land was granted the head of each Winnebago family. But this did not suit about two hundred of the tribe, and Nebraska was not their chosen home.

Journey Back to Wisconsin

Consequently, this number quietly journeyed back to beloved Wisconsin, and to Monroe county. A small plot of land, located at Watermill, eight miles north of Tomah, was already owned by some of the number. The assistance of Harry Lea of Tomah, Indian trader, was secured and the land was divided into ten-acre plots. The head of each family secured a deed to one plot, and thereby became a citizen of Wisconsin. None could thereafter be sent out of the state.

The old Indian village and cemetery at Watermill are today interesting historic spots. The home of Old Antelope or Blue Wing, the last tribal chief, is still standing, and is in a fair state of preservation. The Winnebagoes have left the old village to settle on farms in that vicinity.

Recently many have journeyed to Black River Falls and endeavored to establish claims to Nebraska lands, now valuable and desirable. Other Winnebagoes from Jackson, Columbia and Jancon counties did likewise. In the case of many valuable tracts of lands, no heirs can be located, and such lands revert to the government.

Estates Worth $25,000

In the recent session held at Black River Falls, Attorney K. J. Knoepflet of Waterville, Nebraska, represented the Indians. Other experts in Indian affairs who were on the grounds included Mr. and Mrs. James Miller of the bureau of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.; Oliver Le Merc of Winnebago, Nebraska, and W. B. Dunn, government Indian agent. When an heir was finally located and titles proven, lands are put into the lawful owner's possession, to hold or dispose of as will. In some instances estates inherited amount to from $25,000 to $50,000.

All the controversies of the Black River Falls Winnebago session are caused by laxness in marriages and to the further fact that among the Winnebagoes "all consins are brothers." The amount of money involved in heirships is due to the fact that the almost worthless timber lands of 1866 are in 1922 valued at $200 or more per acre. Small wonder that the once stolid Winnebago has awakened to the fact that Uncle Sam was very generous to the tribe, and it is the obvious duty of the present generation of young Indians, to prove up on titles and heirships, and claim the goodly sums of money.

ILL-FATED HELMET OF THE HEBRIDES

A pointed casque, white with the host of sea birds that nest upon it, is all that remains of the lofty mountain that in some long past era dominated the now sunken valleys west of the Hebrides. Seen from the west, the rock, which rises sixty feet above the ocean, resembles a huge spiked German helmet. The waves have broken down a part of the seaward covered escarpment, and the upper part of the helmet is deeply dented; but the point of it is still sharp and frequently serves as a resting place for one of the huge albatrosses of the north. The helmet appears to have been cloven in two as if with a terrific blow from a sabre; the eastern face is a vertical wall. The island is called Rockall and is quite barren. It is situated in an unfrequented sketch of the ocean and is more than two hundred and eighty miles from the nearest land. Few persons have ever visited it. Indeed, only four landings are recorded.

MODERN INNOVATIONS FOUND IN JERUSALEM BY VIROQUA CITIZEN

MARKS CHANGES IN FAOMUS CITY IN TWELVE YEARS

C. V. Porter Writes of Conversion of Biblical Place Into a Modern City

Editor's Note.—How the old Jerusalem has passed and the new Jerusalem, with automobiles, electric lights, water works and modern buildings, has been built up, all in the space of twelve years, is described in interesting style by C. V. Porter, of Viroqua, who is now abroad, in letters to the Tribune. Two of his epistles, written in the early part of June, are published herewith.

Jerusalem, June 4, 1922. I think I wrote you that in Roma I had a room in Pension Santa Maria for which I paid ten lire per day. To show how the Italian people are pestered by government taxation I will relate a little incident or two. After I had been in the Pension eight days and was about to leave for Naples, through an interpreter, I asked the signorina if I owed her anything more. Her secretary gave me quite an itemized bill which had five government stamps of four different denominations attached to the bottom. The amount of the bill was only about eighty cents for the different taxes they imposed upon me according to law and I gladly paid it for my rent was only sixty cents a day without the tax, and they had treated me beautifully.

In Naples I rented a room for twelve lire and was given a receipt with three stamps attached to it. A gentleman told me that the government tax which restaurants must impose upon their patrons is ten per cent of the amount of the bill added to the bill. My room in Roma was a card nailed up stating that the room rent was eight lire per day, and that card bore a cancelled stamp.

Stamps Everywhere. Circulars posted in windows for advertising purposes bear a government stamp. Several times in Naples I found a waiter in a good restaurant who spoke English enough to give me macaroni and beefsteak with fried potatoes and I handed him ten lire and got no bill at all. I have no doubt the government in such cases gets very little tax.

Lotteries Thrive. The lottery business in Italy and in Egypt uses up a lot of the people's money. One sees crowds of poor people around bulletin boards where are displayed the numbers of the prize bearing tickets. From Naples on May 24, I sailed on one of the government owned steamers for Haifa in Palestine. We were nine days on the trip. I landed June 2, passed quarantine and passport officials and next morning took second class rail to Jerusalem, a five hour ride and seven dollar fare. I rode a whole day from San Remo to Rome third class for $5.00. Rail fare is high in Palestine and I shall be tempted to ride third class with the Arabs to Alexandria when I return in two weeks. The ride from Haifa was an interesting one. We passed near to or through several Jewish colonies, and what a contrast between Arab farming and the farming done in these colonies. These Jews in the first place put on tractors or double teams and plow the land deeply and plow it well. The Arab for thousands of years has used that four inch wide cultivator tooth, the same kind Moses used, to nigger up the soil so he could cover his seed, and he has not prospered at farming and never will.

Spoken English. I rode with a bright young Jew who speaks good English, which is now spoken almost everywhere in Palestine. They tell me, and he said that 15,000 young Jews had immigrated to Palestine in the past year. They come to work in the forty or more Jewish colonies. This young man showed me the colonies along the route we came. Their houses and barns are beautifully and substantially built of stone and have red tile roofs. One colony, Petah Tikva, the grain was all stacked in square oblong stacks. These colonies own many herds of cattle but are not satisfied with their herds and are planning to import Holsteins from Holland and some of the dairy breeds from our country.

When I left the railway station at Jerusalem yesterday I climbed a hill nearby to locate myself. I was lost. It is twelve years since my dear old Australian companion for a week here said to me "Porter, take your last look at Jerusalem; you will never see it again." Yet a kind Providence has allowed me to come here again. I got out my pocket compass. I am well acquainted with the geography of the old city of a dozen years ago. I made a large map on cloth enlarging the map in McMillan's guide, and remember location of places.

Dust Covers All. Everything, olive trees, walls, buildings are covered with the white limestone dust. But so many new structures have gone up on every hand; great massive, splendid buildings of most beautiful workmanship that one can hardly locate himself. A new Jerusalem has taken the place of the old one of a score of years ago. In 1910 there was a stone road from Jaffa to Jerusalem and Jericho, and that was about all one could travel by carriage in comfort unless to Hebron. Now the bulk of the Ford car, and they are nearly all Fords, is heard they tell me, all over Palestine. I went into the postoffice this Sunday forenoon. The girl selling stamps was also telephonic, and I read that air mail service had been suspended to Irak, I believe in Mesopotamia.

I remember no telephone in 1910, nor any newspaper unless a Jewish one and now there are many they tell me. As I write the band is playing and playing beautifully for a dance in my hotel. I doubt if a band or dance had existed in 1910. Then the people depended largely on cisterns for water and they were dirty and the streets were filthy.

When the British army came from the Nile across the desert they piped Nile water into Palestine. An ancient saying had it Jerusalem would be wrested from the Turks only when the Nile water flowed into Palestine. Within a few weeks after the army occupied Jerusalem they had laid an iron pipe a foot in diameter from Ararat out a dozen miles away to the highland west of the walled city, built a reservoir and piped the water into the old city where people could get it.

Death Rate Reduced. Result: The death rate in the old city, terribly high, was reduced one half. Pilate's aqueduct over 40 miles long, was a stone ditch keeping on the level and brought water into the temple area from the same source. The iron pipe in 12 or 14 miles over hill and vale supplies good safe water in plenty. The British have been a blessing to Palestine and every Jew and Christian hopes they will remain, but the soldier boys tell me the expense is too great.

"Most-Useful"

Mary A. Nutting, only woman to receive an honorary degree of Master of Arts at Yale this year, was presented as an authority on nursing, whose devotion, courage, faith, skill and magnificent perseverance have made her today one of the most useful women in the world.

tian princess, Ammonite ladies who worshipped Moloch, and Meolite women who worshipped Chemosh, and also Sidonian ladies who worshipped the Phoenician goddess Ashtarte or Ashtoreth. She wore a half moon shaped head dress. These women had no faith in the God of Israel and Solomon to quiet them, put a god Chemosh at one end of the Mt. of Offense and a god Moloch at the other. This enraged the orthodox Jews and Solomon for all his wisdom was not in good favor with them.

Did you know that Solomon died in prison? A learned Jew said to me one night on a train near La Crosse. "We have old Jewish records, the Talmud and Mishna that prove that," he said. But about the year 600 B. C. Josiah, king of Judah, destroyed the last of these prophets of Baal. He smashed their idols, destroyed their high places and sacred groves and thus removed a terrible curse from Israel and Judah. The prophet Isaiah, or as St. Jerome says, he was more of an evangelist than prophet, thundered against these prophets of Baal. About 713 B. C. he wrote "Tophet is ordained of old; yea for the King is it prepared; he hath made it deep and large," and Manasseh, the king, promptly ordered Isaiah taken down to the old pool of Siloam and sawn in two.

I rested under the great ancient mulberry tree with stones piled around it and an old column to support a branch of it. A slab on the ground with ancient inscription lies under the old tree, an Arab baby in old hammock hung from a branch. That tree marks the place of martyrdom of that prophet of the coming of the Christ. About 600 B. C. Jeremiah took a hand in the fight against these worshippers of Baal. "They have built the high places of Tophet which is in the valley of the Son of Hinnom to burn their sons and their daughters the fire; it shall no more be called Tophet, but the Valley of Slaughter; for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place. And the carcasses of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heavens and the beasts of the earth." How close that prophecy is to the south side of Hinnom Valley is covered thick with tombs and shallow graves which jackals invade.

Thousands Starve

During the siege of Titus, A. D. 70, Josephus tells us 1,200,000 Jews starved to death and their bodies were thrown into that valley. The old Anglo-Saxon chronicle built up during the centuries, says 111,000 starved to death in that siege, a more probable number. If any who read this on Sunday School students the map of Jerusalem in their Bibles will convey to them some idea of the trip I made. But the sides of those valleys Hinnom and Kidron are very steep and covered with stones of all sizes and all the verdure is the irrigated narrow strip down through the King's Dale as the valley is called below the junction of the two ravines. There it was that Abraham met Melchizedek about 2900 years ago, King of Salem, now Jerusalem and praised Abraham and set up a table and bread and Abe paid tithes, gave the king a tenth of his pigeons, donkeys, goats and sheep.

Modern Buildings

I walked up Hinnom Valley and tried to find the A Cedama, built in the original potter's field which was about the 30 pieces of silver Judas threw down in the temple and then went over south of Hinnom and hanged himself. It was built in the bluffside, covered over, a deep pit inside where they threw bodies of pilgrims who came here and died centuries ago. You remember it was from Hinnom, Ge Hinnom the Greeks derived the word Gehenna, the new testament hell. A four inch water pipe runs down into the valley now and modern buildings are going up on the "Hill of Evil Counsel," where Calphas made the trade to betray Jesus to the Jews. Going at two into the International restaurant run by an American Marine wounded at Chateau Thierry, I found a lot of bare legged British soldiers, splendid fellows who had come up from Dudd to take part in the parade on King George's birthday which I missed by being in Tophet and Gehenna.

$35,000 MAYO BOAT MINIATURE HOTEL, IS LAUNCHED ON RIVER

120-Foot Pleasure Craft is Called Largest Screw Propelled Boat on the Mississippi

RARE IMPORTED WOODS ARE USED IN THE CONSTRUCTION

Sleeping Quarters for Crew on Main Deck Instead of Below

Embodying ideas of its owner, set to the best nautical fashion, the 120 foot motor yacht built for Dr. William J. Mayo, famous Rochester surgeon, took to the water in the Mississippi river opposite the lower Burlington yards at St. Paul last week. The launching ceremony, marking the end of eight months' construction work at special shops of the Dingle Boat company, was attended by Dr. and Mrs. Mayo.

The $35,000 pleasure craft, declared to be the largest screw propelled boat on the Mississippi, and more luxurious in its appointments than any other, is to be taken down the river on a 100 mile test cruise, coming as far south as Winona.

Boat is Miniature Hotel

The boat is a miniature hotel with running hot and cold water in state-rooms, built in tubs and washbowls in guest chambers, shower baths for the crew, complete kitchen facilities, and is equipped with its own electric generating and heating plants. Some of the outstanding features of the boat are:

It is 120 feet long, with 60 foot beam and has a 60 ton capacity, drawing 13 inches of water.

Only rare woods, imported from Honduras, India and Australia, were used and the framework was constructed from 3 by 3 pieces of steam-bent white oak, specially tested for soundness.

Simple but elegant is the design of the boat, even leather upholstered motor seats being provided in the observation cabin.

An ivory color scheme with brass and nickel fittings predominates on the main deck, and the inside of the deckhouse on the hurricane deck is finished in mahogany.

Storage space is provided on the afterdeck for the owner's automobile.

Plans were drawn by F. W. Dingle, following suggestions of Dr. and Mrs. Mayo and Captain J. J. Richtman, Dr. Mayo's skipper.

The salon is equipped with piano, comfortable chairs and lounges and built in bookcases.

The dining room has built in china closets and buffet with opalescent glass doors. The galley, equipped with all modern kitchen facilities, is large enough to provide for 30 persons at one time.

There are 11 staterooms and an office for Dr. Mayo, leading from a thickly carpeted hall, at the end of which is a large French mirror.

At the end of the hall are two suites, one being the owner's, the sleeping rooms of which are large enough to accommodate five piece bedroom outfits. These rooms have large closets and tiled bathrooms. Other staterooms have comfortable built in bunks, storage spaces and closets.

Crew Sleep on Main Deck

An innovation of the yacht is the fact that sleeping quarters for the crew are provided on the main deck instead of the lower deck.

The deck house on the hurricane deck, is divided into the pilot house and observation cabin.

In the pilot house are the steering wheel, racks for charts, compass, electric controlling and signaling devices and a specially constructed electric light system to keep the skipper informed of the behavior of the engines. If the engine has stopped the light flashes on the instrument board and other lights keep the pilot informed whether either engine is going ahead or reverse.

The observation hall of the deck house, which is behind the pilot house, is screened with bronze wire and has windows that drop into their slots, allowing complete weather proofing or entirely open cabin. Built in card tables of Australian iron bark, that may be pulled out of their racks at a moment's notice, and the heavy leather motor seats insure diversion for the guests.

The whole deck house has an awning of lightweight, three feet wide, about it, the under side of which is painted green to protect eyes from the sun's rays.

Many Safety Features

Entrance to the lower deck is gained by a stairway off the hall at the forward end of the boat. Engine rooms and boiler rooms and the crew's mess rooms are directly under the dining room and main salon.

Two 200 horse power Sterling marine motors provide power for the propellers while the water pump and auxiliary pump operate the water system.

Safety to occupants has not been overlooked and while screens are provided on all stateroom windows, they are made so that by loosening a hook at the bottom they swing outward, permitting quick egress. Stateroom windows are of Fullman type and may be taken out of their casing easily.

Two large rowboats hung on the hurricane deck, with a capacity of 12 persons each, complete the safety features.

Steering is done by two rudders hung outboard and if one gets out of commission the other may be used efficiently. Motors operate separately.

AMENDMENT TO AID FARMERS PROPOSED BY WM. J. MORGAN

Candidate for Governor Has Plan to Solve Farm Tenantry Problem in Wisconsin

SUGGESTS ESTABLISHMENT OF LONG TERM FARM LOANS

Means Improvement of Undeveloped Section of the State

CHIPPewa FALLS, Wis.—A plan for solution of the farm tenantry problem in Wisconsin through the establishment of long term farm loans made possible by amendment to the state mortgage association act was proposed by Attorney General William J. Morgan in his address here today as a candidate for the governorship of Wisconsin.

Under this amendment, which the attorney general says would insure promptness in passing upon applications for farm loans and for long time grants under state supervision, he believes that the great undeveloped section of northern Wisconsin can be improved and paid for out of the proceeds of the farms while they are being built up.

"The one principle that must be recognized as necessary and adopted is that of amortization of the principle of the long time loan," Attorney General Morgan declared. "The amortized loan that permits of complete payment of principal and interest in 25 years is a mortgage that never fully dies."

"The amendment I advocate," he continued, "it will be possible to afford such credit to settlers that new farms can be developed and paid for out of the proceeds of the farm while it is being improved and built up."

"But the old settlers' requirements will be served as well," Mr. Morgan added. "Many valuable farms in southern Wisconsin will pass into the tenant farm class without some such plan as I propose. We want to make it possible for the boys and girls to stay on the home farm instead of moving into better sections of the state."

"When the owner of a valuable Wisconsin farm wants to retire, he cannot sell his farm to his son or his son-in-law because the young man is unwilling to assume a great burden in the shape of a mortgage due before he can possibly earn the money to pay it out of the profits of the farm. Let him buy it and finance his purchase under the amortization plan, and he will be able to repay it out of the proceeds of the farm."

"Such a plan of rural credits can be safely conducted upon a basis of 65 per cent of farm improvements, and instead of a tenant the retired farmer will have his son and daughter on the old farm."

"My associates and myself offer the people of Wisconsin this definite and concrete plan for long time farm loans. Most men familiar with farm credit needs have come to realize that to be served the farmers business requires financing on long term farm loans, such as we propose."

"It seems peculiar to put in political platforms an expression in favor of rural credits, but these phrases mean nothing. We stand pledged to a definite program which calls for concrete action by the legislature and is not mere words," Mr. Morgan concluded.

DRAMATIC IS MURDER TRIAL IN "FOR THE DEFENSE"
Probably the biggest punch in "For the Defense," a new Paramount picture starring Ethel Clayton which will be shown at the Majestic today, comes in the trial scene. Jennie, the protegee of the heroine, played respectively by Miss Zasu Pitts and Miss Clayton, is on trial for the murder of the hypnotist, Dr. Kasimir, played by Bertram Grassby. Seeing Hope Hampton and James Rennie in "Stardust"

At the Rivoli Thursday to Saturday that the evidence is all going against the girl, the star springs to her feet and, regardless of court procedure, cries:

"She is innocent, I killed him!" In fact, she is not sure but that she did, because she was under a hypnotic spell at the time of the tragedy.

Knowing herself innocent, a fact she has maintained steadfastly throughout the trial, Jennie, determined not to permit her best friend to bear the burden of guilt, reverses her testimony and screams that she alone is guilty. As a matter of fact, neither is guilty—but the rest must

NOTED PLAYERS ASSEMBLED IN CAST OF "THE BEAUTY SHOP"

The most remarkable cast ever assembled for a screen comedy will be seen in "The Beauty Shop" which comes to the Majestic theater Monday and Tuesday. Raymond Hitchcock is the featured player in the screen version, re-creating the role of Dr. Arbutus Budd. Billy B. Van, the famous comedian, and James J. Corbett, formerly heavyweight boxing champion, have important roles. Louise Fazenda, again plays the part of a homely girl, but this time she has a chance—at the end of the picture—to appear as she really is—a very attractive young woman.

Diana Allen will be seen as the lovely ward of Dr. Arbutus Budd. Montagu Love, popular leading man, is the villain of the piece. Those charming and beautiful twins, Madeleine and Marion Fairbanks, play twin parts in "The Beauty Shop." Laurence Wheat, leading man, completes the list of principals.

COMING TO THE MAJESTIC

When John S. Robertson was organizing the big fair scene of "The Spanish Jade," his new Paramount picture, which comes to the Majestic Wednesday and Thursday, in the little township of Carmona near Seville, Spain, the municipal authorities felt the great moment had come for their beloved city to assert its place in the sun.

A proclamation was issued to the population urging them to do their utmost to show the moving picture people a Spanish fair at its best. The town undertook the responsibility of erecting the necessary stalls and booths in the plaza and the women spent days in making paper flowers for the garlands to be hung between the poles of flags and bunting.

BETTY COMPSON FINE IN "THE GREEN TEMPTATION"

Betty Compson's beauty is displayed in a greater variety of costumes in her recent Paramount picture, "The Green Temptation," showing at the Rivoli today and Monday, than in any picture she has ever done. As "Genelle," the Apache, she is vivacious and daring. Her "Columbine" in the pantomime dance with Theodore Kosloff, is piquant and dainty.

As the Amazon warrior, in another striking dance, she is bold and fierce. In the costume of a Red Cross nurse, she is quiet and sympathetic. As Paris' most noted actress, she is haughty and proud. At a mask ball, she is the statuesque Grecian maiden. The dancing costumes are gorgeous and display Miss Compson's beauty and talent as a dancer to a marked degree.

The comedy in this bill features Neal Barns in "Oh, Promise Me!" It is made for laughing purposes only.

AGNES AYRES COMING IN NEW PHOTOPLAY

Rich relettes, lots of them, of the latest style, are a feature of "The Ordeal," Agnes Ayres' latest Paramount starring vehicle, which opens at the Rivoli for two days beginning Tuesday next. Miss Ayres interprets the part of a young widow who inherits a fortune which she will lose if she marries again. Widowed with money are expected to be well-dressed, hence Miss Ayres' wardrobe in this picture is said to be a real delight to the feminine eye.

"The Ordeal," written by W. Somerset Maugham, is said to be a most unusual picture. Included in the cast are Conrad Nagel, Clarence Burton, Edna Murphy, Edward Sutherland, Adele Farrington, Claire DuBrey, Edward Martindel and Shannon Day.

Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Ghost" furnishes the comedy on this program.

"STARDUST," GREAT HUMAN INTEREST STORY, SCREENED

"Stardust," based on Fanny Hurst's great human interest story, will be the screen attraction at the Rivoli theater three days, commencing Thursday.

It was produced under the direction of Hobart Henley with charming Hope Hampton in the stellar role as the forlorn little small town girl whose musical ambitions are squelched at home, but whose talent and ambitions find an outlet in the great city.

Tinged with tragedy and pathos and drenched with romance and ambition "Stardust" is said to provide Miss Hampton with the greatest dramatic vehicle which she has yet been given.

STRAND TODAY

Stories of the Northwest are usually pretty much alike, but it remained for Director Harry Revier to transplant the usual drawing room plot from its hot-house settings to an outpost village in the Far North, and thereby give the screen one of its most thrilling and original themes in years.

Revier has done this in "Life's Greatest Question," which, while it contains foot after foot of exciting man-to-man fist fights, to say nothing of gun plays, also carries along with it an answer to the old question: Should a woman tell her husband of her past life? Revier has married a woman with a past to the town's most prominent citizen, and leaves them to work out their own destiny.

RIVIERA TODAY

Jack London never fails to bring back the old thrills with his stories that sizzle with adventure and romance in the great open spaces where men are "either white or yellow."

In "The Son of the Wolf," the great author crammed abundant drama of the most thrilling nature and Norman Dawn, who filmed the stories, has brought it all out in vivid fashion on the screen. The story has to do with the love of a wanderer in the snowlands for a pretty Indian maid, to win whom he undergoes all manner of hardships and risks all sorts of dangers. In the brilliant cast are such prominent players as Edith Roberts, Wheeler Oakman, Sam Allch, Ashley Cooper, Fred Stanton, Thomas Jefferson and others. "The Son of the Wolf" is the current feature at the Riviera today.

CASINO TODAY

"Island Wives," Vitagraph's spectacular production of life in the South Seas, in which Corinne Griffith has the star role, will be shown at the Casino today.

All the exterior scenes for the colorful pictures were made in Florida on the coast about four miles south of Miami. The gigantic palms rising sheer straight up like the masts of a ship, the tropic profusion of foliage and the long spread of sandy beaches add a pictorial excellence to this production, which it would be almost impossible to surpass. For these scenes the floating palace of a New York millionaire wintering in Florida was borrowed. Under the command of her officers, but with one of the Vitagraph actors playing the part of captain, the craft sailed out of sight of land, and on the open sea some beautiful ocean scenes were made.

THREE ORPHEUM VAUDEVILLE ACTS OFFERED AT RIVOLI

The Rivoli theater offers for Sunday's showing a splendid bill of Orpheum vaudeville and feature pictures.

The vaudeville acts come to La Crosse direct from a run at the Hennepin theatre, Minneapolis, with Charlie Wilson and company as the headline attraction. Charlie, self-styled the "Loose Nut," is a comedian of wide experience and has a way all his own in putting over a satisfying bit of "nut" comedy. Then there are Vyvyan and Kastner who appear in a lively set of impersonations, cleverly done and interspersed with a lot of good comedy. Margaret McKee, known throughout the entire Orpheum circuit as California's Mockingbird, presents an act which she calls, "Song Impressions." Theatregoers who like something different and original are sure to enjoy this young lady's representation of impressions she has gained of people she has met in her travels which she tells to her audience in song.

The new Paramount release "The Green Temptation," with Betty Compson, Mablon Hamilton, Theodore Kosloff, and Mary Thurman, and a Christie comedy, "Oh Promise Me," make up the photoplay program.

Thousands of dollars are reclaimed each year by London companies who do nothing but rake over millions of tons of waste, gathered in every nook and corner of the great city of London. COLLEGE STUDENT SERVES VOLUNTARY PRISON SENTENCE

Nels Anderson Seeks First
Hand Facts at Cook
County Jail

JAIL FACILITIES THERE
SAID TO BE INADEQUATE

Self Respect of Convicts is Pronounced

CHICAGO, Ill.—Inmates of the Cook county jail will share a last night's "brawl" and "a man can share smoke and vats," if he is liked, even if he has no money," according to Nels Anderson, a graduate student at the University of Chicago. Mr. Anderson declared in a report to Dean George W. Kerkway of New York, director of the Cook county jail survey, that while a voluntary prisoner at the jail he found cells six by eight feet in area, and with provision for three men, occupied by four or five, and without "much room for two men to sleep on the floor."

"In police terms," said Mr. Anderson, "the medical examination might be called a farce, or else the doctor was a very efficient man. He examined thirty or more of us in less than five minutes."

Jail Crowded
"The old part of the jail, in which I spent most of my stay, was very crowded. The cell is equipped to accommodate three men, but there were four here and sometimes five in some cells. I was told they were even larger during the winter. The cells are about six feet by eight, and give room for a toilet, a wash-bowl and space for a three-doubt bed. There is too much room for two men to sleep on the floor. The prisoners are confined to a mattress and pillow which are filled with corn husks. About once a month the ticks are changed and cleaned. A blanket, towel, sheet and pillow case are issued to each man."

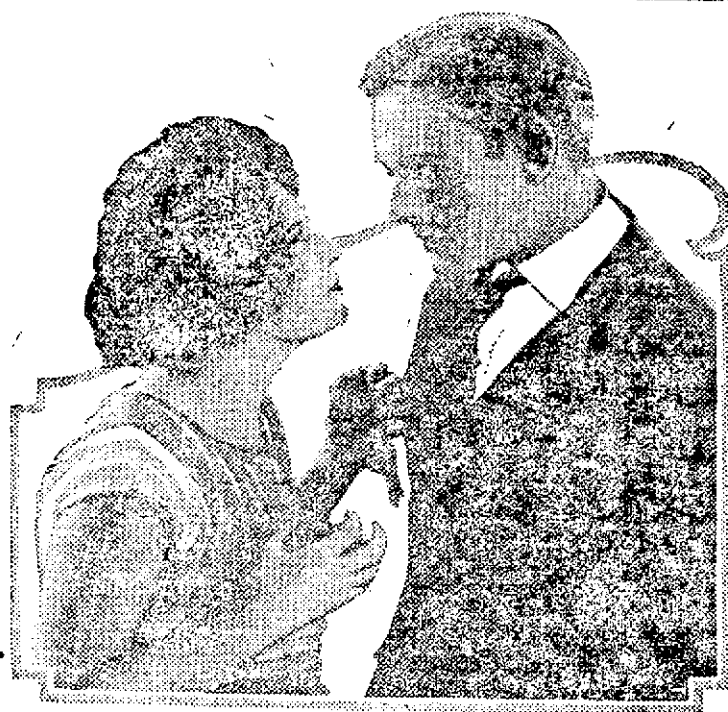

"I noted that self-respect with many men in jail is very pronounced, and even in jail there is a struggle for status. Offenses against property are regarded with tolerance, and even considered praiseworthy, but social offenses are seldom condoned."

"The inmates will share a last cigarette, and a man can share smoke and vats if he is liked even if he has no money. A man's 'trap' seldom stands in the way of his efforts to make friends. His trap is society's excuse for detaining him, but society means very little to a man on the inside. He isn't concerned with the past, but with the present and future. He shapes his attitude by his immediate contacts with society. He has no desire to think why the bars are placed between him and the street."

Store in Connection
"A store is operated in connection with the jail by someone who has that connection. The prices are not particularly low but it seems to me in view of the fact that the prisoners do all the work that a cell could be sold for less than five cents and pie for less than ten cents a cent."

Had Mr. Anderson's fellow-inmates known that he was in jail voluntarily and that "on the outside" he was a graduate student of the University of Chicago, they would have misinterpreted his behavior and set upon him as a snob, he said.

"Had they decided I was a snob," said Mr. Anderson, "some of them would have stepped on my toes and my resentment would have been the signal for a fight. For that reason I kept my purposes a secret. I was forced to think fast and invent an acceptable story when on one occasion I received a special visit in jail.

Variation Arouses Talk
"You see, any kind of variation from the old groove arouses discussion. One man, while in a drunken frenzy, had shot his daughter. He did not dare to talk about his case so he told a man that he had tried to steal an elephant from the Lincoln park zoo. He says that for several days as he moved about the hall he was pointed out as the nut who tried to steal one of the Lincoln park elephants."

"I went to jail, sentenced on a drunk and disorderly charge, to discover the spirit of the jail, and I am satisfied that I got what I went after. I expected a few hard knocks, and I got them. But the long waits for trial to which first offenders are commonly subjected ought to be eliminated; I am convinced they have much to do with shaping the prisoner's attitude toward life. This I pointed out in a report which I made for Dean Kerkway."

WAR ON TIPPING

The Olympic Field club of Chicago, which claims to be the largest golf club in the world, has officially declared war on the tipping evil. Both tipper and tippee are to be brought under jurisdiction. Members offending are to be cited before the board of governors, while employees guilty of accepting tips are to be dismissed instantly.

If the officials are backed by the support of the bulk of the membership something may be accomplished that may serve as an example for war on tipping everywhere. From all that can be gleaned the progress of the abuse of this club was like it has been everywhere. A few took this method of "recognizing" the help of caddies in seeing they were given

GOLF LINKS KEPT FREE FROM MOLES BY BLACKSNAKES

Reptiles Coaxed to Pennsylvania
Club by Promise of Homes
Rent Free

COATESVILLE, Pa.—Blacksnakes seeking a comfortable home, rent and tax free, are invited to the golf links of the Coatesville Country club. Along the sides of the course underbrush has been permitted to grow thick, and tempting rock piles with full southern exposures have been placed to lure the snakes from adjacent lands.

An educational campaign has been inaugurated among golfers with an aversion to reptiles in order that there may be no repetition of the deaths by violence which came to two of the organization's pets.

Champions of the blacksnake declare that it is the most efficient natural enemy of the ground mole, which admittedly is the natural enemy of golf greens. Not only does the snake go right into the mole's borings and discourage that animal's operations, but it is alleged to kill off rattlers and copperheads. It is harmless to mankind and is unlikely to appear suddenly to disconcert a player about to putt, for it works at night.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL CONVENTION MEETING IN MISSOULA JULY 19

"One of Greatest Business and Pleasure Meetings," Says Hotaling

SOCIAL NUMBERS ON PROGRAM WITH CONVENTION BUSINESS

Prominent Speakers to Address Meeting

ST. PAUL, Minn.—"One of the greatest business and pleasure combination meetings in the history of the organization" is the promise held forth for those who attend the thirty-seventh annual convention of the National Editorial Association at Missoula, Mont., starting July 19.

H. C. Hotaling, executive and field secretary of the association, in making that promise to editors and other newspaper men, declares that he expects an unusual attendance, thoroughly representative of the organization's wide spread membership.

The convention city is cooperating with the Montana Press association in making extensive arrangements to entertain the visitors during their three-day stay in the city, and towns along the route to be traveled by the speeder have three trains carrying the newspaper men, also are preparing to show their hospitality.

Special entertainments will be provided for the editors in Yellowstone Park and later a tour conducted by the Blackfoot Indians will be made through Glacier Park.

Social Program

Convention business is interspersed with social numbers on the program, while the speakers' specialties in their chosen fields of activity will impart their knowledge of journalism and in various phases, gleaned from years of experience in writing the editorial pen.

ALBANIA ASKS FOR RECOGNITION FROM AMERICAN NATION

U. S. Recognition Would be Greatest Boost Albania Could Have, Says Minister

TIRANA, Albania.—"Recognize us," said Bey Ahmet Zogu, Albania's minister of the interior to the Associated Press correspondent in a recent interview. "If America recognizes us and sends a diplomatic representative to Albania, it will be the biggest boost Albania can have," he declared.

"We are an ancient and proud race. We have traditions antedating the Christian era. We have suffered under the tyrant's heel. We have been oppressed by both Asiatic and European peoples. We have dreamed for centuries a dream of freedom. We are the most homogeneous race in the Balkans and long for the chance to determine our destiny by ourselves. America, whose pages of history glow with glorious deeds in the cause of human liberty, should recognize Albania, for it is a country which has suffered long centuries of servitude and now, born again as a nation, wants to retain the liberty so long withheld."

Bey Ahmet Zogu comes of noble fighting stock. Tribal traditions and feats in Albania have bred in him a hereditary warrior's spirit. Today, he is the one hero of Albania, and he stands out in bold relief as the young nation is trying to foster its national existence. He is a young man—not more than 25 years of age, and is regarded as the real ruler of Albania. Slender of stature, tall, blonde, with blue piercing eyes, he has one passion and that is to put Albania on its feet and set her house in order. Intrigues creep into the political life of the young and struggling state, but Zogu has always been able to nip them in the bud and maintain respect for constituted authority.

"Albania is rid of internal quarrels," he said to the correspondent. "We have a little army of 9,000 men. These are to be used to keep order. When other nations say that Albania is attacking them, it is absurd, for Albania has neither the means nor the forces to attack anybody. We have a population estimated at over 1,000,000 and all Albanians. There is not one foreign tribe or sect or group within our borders. On this alone, we have a right to our nationhood."

AUSTRIA PREPARES FOR WAR AGAINST OLD KING ALCOHOL

Fifty Millions of Dollars Collected as Fund for Prohibition Drive

CHICAGO.—Austria "is at last awake to the necessity of a great action against alcohol," President D. M. Hainisch of that country stated in a letter to Virgil G. Hinshaw, president of the Prohibition Foundation made public by the latter today. Mr. Hinshaw visited Austria last October in the interests of the prohibition movement.

"The Federal Minister for Social Administration has allocated the sum of fifty millions for this purpose," the letter continued. "And the National Council will pass a law in accordance with which this money will be employed. A big committee is in course of formation to which most members of the American-Austrian Committee will also belong. Altogether the general feeling at present in Austria is favorable to the idea of alcoholism being fought by means of public measures."

"Large sections of the population realize at last that a nation in our present economic distress cannot afford such a high rate of expensive consumption of alcohol, and that, therefore, all facilities for advancing this consumption must be removed or reduced."

"I hope, by intensifying our propaganda, thanks to the means put at our disposal, we shall succeed in utilizing this favorable feeling and shall pave the way for a comprehensive prohibition of alcohol or at least do the first steps towards that goal."

"I am certain that now all agencies at our disposal will start work and I think I shall be able shortly to report on the effect and success of our activity in Austria."

Fifty Minutes To Go

A nervous motorist was up before the town judge.

"What's the charge, officer?" inquired the court anxiously.

"Speedin' forty miles an hour, yer honor."

"That's burst out the defendant indignantly. "Is an outrageous lie, sir. Why, I hadn't been gone from the house more than ten minutes before he arrested me."—American Legion Weekly.

WALTER HOOVER WON DIAMOND SCULLS IN FACE OF HEAVY WIND

American Would Have Set New Record Under Normal Conditions is Belief

HOOVER'S SCULLING UNEQUALLED ON THE THAMES IN MANY YEARS

Duluth Man Designed Racing
Shell in Which He Won

By The Associated Press.—Rowing a record in the face of a strong wind and a driving rain, Walter Hoover, the crack American sculler, outdistanced his opponent, J. Beresford, Jr., of the Thomas Rowing club, by nearly fifty yards Saturday and the Diamond Sculls trophy, Blue Ribbon award in the world of rowmen, will follow Hoover to his native city of Duluth, Minn.

The time made by the American for the course of one mile, 550 yards, was 22 minutes 32 seconds, more than a minute longer than the previous record, but Hoover's officials believe that Hoover's sculling was unequalled on the Thames in many years. Hoover, who has brought a record in the world of rowmen, will follow Hoover to his native city of Duluth, Minn.

Hoover rowed against one of the best English scullers, Beresford, who has spent much of his time since heigh in a shell on the Thames, under the guidance of his father, an expert of some repute in his day. The American went into the lead at the start and the Englishman was compelled to follow in his wake all the way. Leading by a length at the quarter, he easily increased the distance separating him from Beresford.

The Englishman appeared to be greatly handicapped by the rough water and after Hoover started away from him he continued with a stroke of 22 to a minute in an effort to make up some of the distance, but soon was obliged to reduce it to 20 to the minute. This he maintained to the finish with a steady loss of distance.

One of the most exhibitions in the past history of the rowing class was the way Hoover's sculling was carried out. Hoover's sculling was a perfect example of the American style, everything about him is unorthodox, from the shell, which is designed along lines of a naval torpedo, to the way he wears around his head, but however different from what has been considered a sculling helmet in England for a century it is really admitted that Hoover attains what is still the principal object in sculling—dash and speed.

The story of the American's attainment of what is considered the world's sculling championship in the face of a strong wind and rain, after two years' hard work on the border between the racing shell and his rowing, is a most interesting story. He decided to quit the sport. He decided to put in one more year. Taking stock of himself, he reached the conclusion that his best record, and that he started at three miles of rowing daily. He married on a diet and continued his rowing practice, for which he was rewarded.

Chief among the other events of today's rowing was the race for the Grand Challenge cup. This went to the famous London club, which defeated the Thames club by a length.

WOMAN BREAKS WORLD RECORD FOR 100-YARD BACK STROKE SWIM

NEW YORK.—Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois Athletic club, Chicago, broke the world's record for the 100-yard back stroke swim for women in a 75-foot pool Saturday by one-fifth second. She finished in one minute 15.45 seconds.

In breaking the mark she established last March in Milwaukee for the 100-yard swim, Miss Bauer defeated Miss Helen Kitzing, Olympic fancy diving champion by ten yards, and Miss Helen Bonhuy by 15 more.

This is the tenth world record that Miss Bauer has broken since coming here last Saturday.

IN THE SPORT MIRROR

By R. L. BANGSBURG
ON the occasion of the first meeting of the Nelson and Montague baseball teams on the Fourth of July La Crosse fans witnessed for the first time an accident which resulted in the serious injury of two local players. Luckily, and to the amazement of the thousands who shuddered when the collision came, the boys are again up and able to be about.

Up until last Tuesday La Crosse has escaped from witnessing such scenes, which from the very nature of the sport, inevitably occur everywhere. Without exception, serious injury and even fatalities, result to participants of baseball through one source or another during each season. But, out of the accident has grown a greater sincerity and spirit of friendly rivalry than perhaps has existed between the clubs this season.

The two players injured in the Fourth of July game at Copeland park are martyrs to a cause which has drawn the respective managements of local baseball clubs closer together and has stimulated a feeling of which some few fans may well take heed. The courtesies exchanged between the Nelson and Montague baseball heads over the accident mark the greatest advancement possible toward a common ground and a common welfare and leaves only in its wake a suggestion that supporters of the two clubs assume a similar attitude to make the situation ideal.

A letter from W. R. Montague to H. J. Wittenberg is self-explanatory:

Mr. H. J. Wittenberg,
Manager Nelson Baseball Club,
1230 Caledonia Street,
La Crosse, Wisconsin.
My dear Mr. Wittenberg:

I was out to see Fitzkie last night at the St. Francis hospital, and perceived a very beautiful bouquet of flowers, a gift of the Nelson baseball club. Please accept for the Nelson baseball club and convey to each member thereof, our appreciation and thanks for remembering Fitzkie.

The accident was indeed a lamentable one, but such kind feelings as you and the members of your club have shown toward Fitzkie, not only takes away the bad effect of such unavoidable accidents, but serves to greatly foster a true and sincere spirit of rivalry between organizations, and greatly assist in putting baseball on a higher and cleaner level. The attitude you have shown toward us we assure you that it will be appreciated, and for our organization I can assure you that it will be reciprocated at all times.

We hope that "Ducky" Smith has fully recovered, and hope that if we can ever be of any assistance you will not hesitate to call upon us. It will be a courtesy, not only appreciated, but reciprocated at any time.

With kind personal regards and wishing you success, I am,
Yours very truly,
(Signed) W. R. MONTAGUE.

GET A NICKEL FROM SMITH

The latest "tinney" movement is to be launched in the United States, "get a nickel from the Smiths," will be the war cry raised in every city, town and hamlet. It will be sponsored by the Capt. John Smith Memorial association, the headquarters of which are in Norfolk, Va. Each contribution will swell a fund for the erection of a gigantic monument to the memory of Capt. Smith, on the spot at Cape Henry where in 1607, he and his band of colonists first set foot on American soil.

With millions of Smiths, Smyth, Smythes Smithers and all of the similar cognomen contributing, it is hoped that the total will be sufficient to erect the tallest monument in America. Standing at the entrance of Hampton roads, it will be visible far out to sea, while a permanent concrete road will connect it with the Virginia beach-Cape Henry highway.

The ambitions of the association go beyond the erection of the monument. They hope to initiate a movement to bring the bones of Capt. Smith from the old Skinner street cemetery in London to Virginia where they can be enshrined.—Washington Star.

NORTH RANDALL, CLEVELAND, O.—By The Associated Press.—Single G. has demonstrated again that he is the best pacer in the Grand Circuit. He defeated the best pacers by training for the free-for-all purse, at North Randall. He won the event in straight heats and set a new season's pacing record for one and two miles by negotiating the distance in 2:03 3-4 and 2:02 3-4 respectively. Pop Geers, veteran driver, had a narrow escape from injury in the 2:15 heat. As the horses were scoring for the second heat, Queen Alix backed into the Geers' sulky overturning it. The veteran reinsman escaped with a slight shaking up.

One of the biggest upsets of the week came in the last event which Mirren Geary won. Sun Flash, one of the hottest favorites of the meeting, won the first heat easily, but was unable to beat the winner in the next two.

WHITEHALL TO OPPOSE NELSONS IN RETURN GAME AT COPELAND PARK TODAY

A return game with Whitehall is the attraction to be staged by the Nelson baseball club at Copeland park this afternoon. Using three utility pitchers to save their leading hurler for their game with Blair on the Fourth of July, Whitehall was defeated by the local club last Sunday, 10 to 1. Johnson, first string hurler, was finally inspired in the seventh to stop an onslaught which he did successfully in holding Satek's tribe to one hit in the three innings. Johnson is the man who will be sent against the locals today for the full nine innings. He has lost two games to Blair, 3 to 0, and 6 to 4, but in spite has a record of whiffing 14 of the Blair sluggers in a single game. And that is no trivial stunt. To quote Bill Reun, Johnson is one of the best hurlers in this section of the state.

Contrary to early predictions, Krause is slated for the mound against Whitehall this afternoon, while Satek will don the mask. Stoneman, it was believed, would be placed in an outfield position to rest from duties behind the bat. He is usually as capable in the field. Krause is in good condition for the game. Johnson, the visiting hurler, is a native of Eau Claire with good control and knowledge of the use of the splitter. The game will start promptly at 3:30.

Montagues At Viroqua Today Second Game

The Montague baseball club journeys to Viroqua today for the second contest with Keuhn's crew at the Viroqua Fair grounds.

In the first appearance of the Viroqua club here last Sunday, the locals were victorious by a count of 6 to 3. Morrison was in the box for the visitors, showing up on good form, but it was expected that Haglings would be selected for today's game in an effort to break even in the games.

He was taken from the track unconscious but regained consciousness at a local hospital, where he was resting quietly late this afternoon.

BOY SCOUTS TO CAMP WITH FULL BLOODED MUS-QUA-KIE INDIAN

DAN YOUNG BEAR TO TELL STORIES OVER CAMP FIRE

Treat is in Store for Lads Who Enjoy Camp at Council Bay
this Summer

Dan Young Bear, a full blooded Mus-qua-kie Indian, whose ancestors for hundreds of years have been chiefs of their tribe, will be the camp director of Camp Young Bear, the La Crosse Council, Bay Scout camp, which is named after him.

It was Dan Young Bear's great-grandfather who signed the famous treaty with the government, as chief of the Foxes, which gained for the United States the beautiful lands of Iowa. The last active chief of the tribe was Chief Push-to-noke-qua. Dan Young Bear's grandfather, since his death they term their leader "Chairman of the Council," which position Dan's father now holds.

How Name Was Obtained

The Indians claim that the name, Muskwa-kie, was given to them by the great spirit when they were created. Muskwa-kie translated means, "red earth." The significance of this is that their great Creator made them from red earth. At present there are 500 members of this old tribe residing on an average of a little more than eight acres of land among the hills, groves and meadows which skirt the banks of the beautiful Iowa river in Tama county, near Tama, Iowa, enjoying the rude, wild life and cherishing the customs of their ancestors of a century ago, relishing the dog feast and growing zealous in the medicine dance, marrying and divorcing as their fathers did before the light of a Christian civilization spread beyond the banks of the Mississippi river.

Is Peaceful Tribe

The Muskwa-kie tribe has always been peaceful and a century ago it comprised over half a million braves. At camp Dan will tell the stories of the race, including that of the customs of burial of chiefs, their religion, rituals, general customs, and stories of the great flood which has been handed down to him by his ancestors.

The Muskwa-kie are governed by their own tribal laws, the most unique of these being that of marriage.

Will Teach Dances

At camp Dan will teach the Indian dances, Indian folk-lore, songs, throwing the lariat, archery and swimming. Dan will dress in his tribal costume three times a week and every Sunday evening for the benefit of visitors who are in camp at that time, demonstrating all the well known Indian dances, the Maiden, the Swan, the Buffalo, the Snake, Friendship and the War dance.

The boy who spends one or two periods in Camp Young Bear will come back thrilled with an adventure which, in a few years hence, when Indian lore has faded into civilization, will be of value to him, in that he can relate to others his experience.

A WORD TO THE WISE

Watch your neighbors gradually rising in the world, then ascertain how they are doing it. In nine cases out of ten you will find they have purchased their little homes, often on easy terms, while their less enterprising neighbor is still paying rent. A word to the wise is sufficient. If you have not yet started on a home of your own, do not delay. Obtain particulars concerning some of the desirable property on our books. There are many good honest values which we are offering. The first requisite in starting a home is the lot or location. We have a list of about four hundred lots carefully selected from which to choose. 7 8 9

Roethal, Leon Bell, Carl E. Reynolds and Byron Genner.
